Carmel students' Yosemite heroism

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A YOSEMITE camping trip that was to be celebrated with a final Saturday night stay on world-famous Half Dome turned into an eight-hour ordeal of tragedy and heroism for a group of Carmel area students and their chaperones.

The Regional Occupational Program students were the first on the scene after lightning bolts struck a separate group of five hikers huddled in a cave atop the 8,842-ft. high world-famous peak that is 8.4 miles from the valley floor.

Two of the hikers — Robert Frith of Mountain View and Brian Jordan of Hayward — were killed. Injured and facing possible loss of their legs are Tom Rice of Los Gatos and Bruce Weiner of Mountain View. A fifth hiker, Adrian Esteban of Sunnyvale, was not seriously injured.

But without the aide and heroism of participants in the Carmel High School ROP program, the death toll may have risen.

It was Jymy Friday, a 21-year-old Carmel Valley resident and student at California Polytechnical University at San Luis Obispo, who first discovered the injured. She went down the treacherous trail in the dark of night to bring back first aid supplies.

Carmel chaperone Bill Lester, who lives in Yosemite, arrived shortly after Friday. A trained emergency medical technician, Lester helped stabilize the injured until rescue helicopters arrived hours later.

Lester, who the students affectionately call

"Brutus," was assisted by another Carmel chaperone, Renee Miller, who attends California State University at Chico.

Two other emergency medical technicians from the University of California, Davis (known to local residents only as "Diane" and "Mike") had arrived concurrently with Lester and Miller and started working on the injured.

And then there was the courage of Laurie Husby of Carmel and Winston Aucutt of Pebble Beach.

YOSEMITE'S Half Dome, as photographed by the late Ansel Adams, is a marvel of nature's work. But for a group of Carmel area students and their chaperones camping last week, Half Dome was a tragic place to be. Several students aided in the rescue of three hikers injured when lightning struck the top of the peak Saturday night. Two others died in the incident. (Monolith, The Face of Half Dome, Yosemite National Park, 1927. Photography by Ansel Adams. Courtesy of the Trustees of the Ansel Adams Publishing Rights Trust. All rights reserved.)

Support lawsuits

Dear Editor:

The Holman Highway has served its purpose well over the years; however it is now inadequate to support recent developments. To add the traffic generated by the Spanish Bay Resort (SBR) would expose the government bodies involved in the authorization of the SBR as ignorant of two basic planning principles.

First, that adequate infrastructure must be in place prior to development, and second, decisions should be based on adequate information (i.e., an environmental impact report that thoroughly states that environment as it is and how development will impact it).

Also, the Pebble Beach Co.'s pursuit of the SBR clearly shows their ignorance of these basic planning principles as well as a distressing callousness to the health and well-being of Pagroviens.

Emptying more automobiles onto the Holman Highway lengthens emergency medical response time and lowers the quality of life by subjecting locals to more long lines (a simple fact that the EIR does not cover). It was a significant mistake for the Pacific Grove City Council to have dropped that city's participation in the SBR lawsuit. That decision was not made with the best interest of Pagroviens in mind.

As for the foreseeable future there are no funds to expand the Holman Highway to the needed four lanes, yet there exists the new DLI expansion, The Glen, and the 17 Mile Drive Village developments, all of which combine to make a bad situation worse. (Holman Highway is at level "F" — Cal Trans designation for the worst level attainable.) Their existence exemplifies incompetent planning by city government by way of allowing high-density developments in areas with inadequate infrastructure.

The Holman Highway should have been expanded to four lanes from one end to the other before such high-density projects evolved, or the densities should have been reduced to complement the two-lane highway.

The acceleration and deceleration lanes as planned by the Pebble Beach Co. will do nothing but allow accelerated access into a traffic jam. These added lanes are a stupid feeble design by an otherwise intelligent company.

This band-aid approach is insufficient. It is poor dressing, of which there is a lot, on a resort that does not belong. The Holman Highway has reached its carrying capacity and this is why there is and should be a lawsuit against the Spanish Bay resort.

Slow the course

Dear Editor:

In regard to the heavy controversy regarding the developers vs. locals, here is my opinion.

Developers cannot afford to weigh environmental impacts of areas or project practicability of a project, because "developing areas" is their bread and butter. This area is very desirable, and there is a lot of money to be made here.

That is why we as the community have to fight to protect our beautiful peninsula — for the environment's sake and for ours and our children's. I personally have not voiced myself enough and I see the trees being cut down, the air starting to smell more like exhaust than air, traffic jams, and it is scaring me. We read about polluted water everywhere, acid rain, in places near us. Also, drought: it is going to happen again. If we suffered before, how is it going to be with several thousand more people?

Our best interests are not being considered. Sure we are cleaner environmentally than a lot of areas, but for how long? The peninsula is full, it was first come first served, now we are visiting area only. I am third generation Carmelite.

Oppose sewage plant

Dear Editor:

The current proposal by the Pebble Beach Community Services District to build a large sewage treatment plant in Del Monte Forest is totally unnecessary. Its location, just below the Morse Reserve, could have a potentially devastating impact on this national botanical treasure.

The people unlucky enough to live in the vicinity will suffer a traumatic loss in their quality of life and a severe lowering of property values. The only rationale for this plant is to reclaim water for use on the golf courses in the forest but, due to geographical constraint as to size, its output will not satisfy even the full needs of the present courses, let alone the two new ones being planned.

If the Pebble Beach Company has $11 million to contribute to a reclamation plant, it should invest in the most cost-effective and least environmentally damaging approach.

The Carmel Sanitary District has a comprehensive reclamation plan which will serve the needs of the entire peninsula. The Coastal Commission has been asked to evaluate the merits of the two plans before it grants a use permit for the Pebble Beach plant. This is imperative.

To inflict a gross, smelly sewage treatment facility on the residents of the forest and their neighbors in Del Monte Park, a facility which is duplicative and unnecessary, is outrageous and must not be tolerated. I urge all concerned to contact the Coastal Commission and express their opposition.

Spirit of giving

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people of the community who helped the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross during the Big Sur fires and those who offered assistance. It is rewarding to see that the spirit of giving is alive and well. After all, isn't this what life is all about?

Again, thank you for a job well done.

Publicity contest

Dear Editor:

It's a shame that the modern voting process has turned into a publicity contest rather than a compilation of carefully researched individual votes. The outcome of this week's recall election is but one example of the lethargic attitude of many members of this community.

As a college student, I am often approached with various petitions regarding a variety of issues. I will sign some, but only if I know both sides of the issue. The point is, if you don't have the time or desire to carefully research the issues, don't vote.

There was far more publicity given to the rumors and hearsay on which the recall was based than on the facts on which voters' decisions should have been made in the Carmel Unified School District.

Who should determine the need for change? Teachers? Parents? How about students? In particular, graduates of Carmel schools.

Ask any Carmel High graduates if they

Erosion control program deserves approval

EROSION along the banks of the Carmel River has been a chronic and frustrating problem, and one that sometimes seems without solution.

In desperate efforts to shore up their land, riverfront property owners have dumped chunks of concrete, old automobile tires, wooden snags, and practically everything else they could find along the threatened banks.

The result has been an unsightly and often ineffectual attempt to contain the meandering river and its continual appetite for more land. No one seems greatly pleased with efforts to date to correct the problem.

Some property owners have spent large sums of money to protect their land, with mixed results. Often, what one property owner does or doesn't do upstream can have devastating effects on property downstream.

Core of the problem, of course, is that the Carmel River was dammed years ago to supply man's water needs. The result of the dams is that the natural vigor of the river has been reduced to a fraction of its former flow, with the result that it meanders from side to side as it chews on the banks.

Left alone, the river would flow fast and strong to scour out a narrow and deep channel, thus staying confined in its natural streambed. But — as residents have all too often discovered — today's river is a sick, self-destructive remnant of its original self.

As the weakened river erodes its banks, it deposits sedimentation in the channel, which further pushes the river outward, accelerating the destruction.

Because no single public agency — until formation of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District — had overall authority for the river, efforts to curtail erosion have been piecemeal and frustrating.

But now the water management district has proposed a comprehensive erosion control effort as part of the Carmel River management program, concentrated initially on 100 parcels along the two-mile Boronda Bridge area of the river.

Residents, including both property owners and tenants in the area, are voting by mail whether these parcels should be assessed up to $8.40 per linear foot to raise about $150,000 for extensive willow planting and installation of concrete gabions.

The willows would, when firmly established, provide stream bank stability. And the gabions would divert the sprawling river back toward its natural channel.

The assessment would be a one-time cost for the project, over and above the already-approved 37.5 cent-per-linear-foot annual charge for the comprehensive Carmel River management program.

This program seems to offer what has been sadly lacking for years along the river: a clear and organized approach to erosion control which assesses all property owners on an equitable basis.

It's a good bargain, not only for the Boronda residents but for all who live along or enjoy the Carmel River, and its passage is recommended to voters.

were satisfied with their education and the odds are that they will say no. The lack of a disciplinary academic environment in Carmel schools is appalling. How will these changes be made if no one will challenge the stone wall of the status quo?

Resistance to change is a cop-out. People say it's too hard to make the changes needed, then when someone is willing to make the changes, they are labeled as a radical and thrown out of office. If the people of this community continue to behave like lemmings they will soon reach a corresponding destiny.

Don't change gate

Dear Editor:

It has come to the public's attention that there was a proposal made by one of our Carmel city councilmen for making San Antonio a one-way street into Pebble Beach; or moving the Carmel gate farther into Pebble Beach.

We of the Carmel Business Association want to publicly voice our concern over the impact this would have on travel patterns.

If San Antonio Street (or any other street) is made a one-way street into the Pebble Beach Properties, travelers would have to use one of the other three gates.

If travelers exit Pebble Beach through the Country Club or Pacific Grove Gate, it would increase traffic on Highway 68, Highway 1 and either Ocean Avenue or Carpenter Street. If they exit Pebble Beach by the Carmel Hill Gate, that would increase traffic on Highway 1, and either Ocean Avenue or Carpenter Street.

The Carmel City Council has expressed their worry over Highway 68 congestion; we think they should look again at this proposal that has been made, and leave the gate where it is now located, and leave it a two-way passage.

Carmel Business Association

Recall recount needed

Dear Editor:

Perhaps a recount is needed in the recent Carmel Unified School District election as the results don't seem to add up. A vote was either for the new people or for the old people, but in both cases it was for the benefit of the district. So, how did the parcel tax measure fail? Surely all of the conscientious voters were concerned about the welfare of the district. What happened? We think there were too many losers in this election.

Carmel faces grim news on water

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IF THERE had been one more day in water year 1984-85, Carmel could very well be facing a building moratorium.

That grim news is to be presented to the Carmel City Council when it meets at 4 p.m. Aug. 6 in the Bingham Room at Sunset Center.

The council will receive a report from staff planner Brian Roseth that indicates the city used 99.6 percent of its available water supply.

The water use figures are expected to fuel further restrictions on water conservation to be considered by the council next Tuesday.

In addition to extension of an emergency water conservation ordinance, the council is to:

- Consider a use permit application from the Carmel Creamery ice cream parlor, which was denied by the board of adjustments because of its potential water use. The restaurant also generated controversy when the city discussed banning the sale of ice cream cones.
- Review Councilwoman Helen Arnold's proposal to buy the Grunion Run site as a central supply depot for merchants. The plan is to alleviate truck congestion problems downtown.
- Discuss the potential sale of Flanders Mansion and Martin Road properties inside Mission Trail Park.
- Discuss a city position on a plan by Monterey-Salinas Transit to eliminate bus route 13 between Carmel and Pacific Grove over Highway 68.

• Hire a consultant to develop the master plan assessment — a long range program to address the environmental impacts of commercial growth in Carmel and what restrictions are needed to protect the city.

Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Manager Bruce Buel said the city of Carmel consumed 1,027 ac. ft. of its 1,038 ac. ft. of water available in 1984-85. (There are 325,851 gallons of water in one acre foot.)

Using Buel's figures, the city would have exceeded its available water supply if there had been another day plus a few hours in water year 1984-85. The city used an average of 2.8 ac. ft. of water per day.

If Carmel had consumed more than its allotted 1,030.8 ac. ft., the water district then would have the authority to impose a city-wide ban on water meter connections.

But the district will not impose any restrictions on Carmel this year even though the city came within a couple of acre feet of

A MOTORIST found herself caught between a construction truck and huge delivery truck on San Carlos Street recently. The city council is reaching its allotment.

"I SERIOUSLY doubt the district could stop setting water meters as I read the ordinance," Buel said.

"Carmel has water and can continue setting meters probably for another year."

Buel reported that water use increased district-wide by 6 percent with the city of Monterey being the largest consumer.

"The city of Monterey had a monster jump," Buel said in reaction to that municipality's water use increase from 4,465 ac. ft. to 5,283 ac. ft. "That's just a tremendous jump."

A water district technical advisory committee has begun to review the allocation system which was developed to preserve existing water supply to the year 2000.

Each jurisdiction and the county were given a water allocation based on present use and future growth. Carmel continually has complained that the district used the wrong base, which was the year after the drought in the late 1970s.

Immediately after the drought Carmel residents still conserved water, but were penalized by being allocated less in the future based on their consumption that year, city officials believe.

Today, Carmel has imposed its own conservation measures while the rest of the peninsula continues to grow and use water in record amounts, city officials believe.

"Water is an area-wide problem and everybody should be under the same regulations to preserve water," Councilman Robert Stephenson said.

"For the Carmel government to have to say 'no you can't use water' is unfair," Stephenson said. "Something is haywire when we have to stop all development (and) washing cars."

"I think we're chopping off our hand when nobody else cares."

The problem is that — under district rules — representatives of other cities would have to part with a percentage of their supply for Carmel to obtain more water.

The news that Carmel was at 99.6 percent of its water allocation did not surprise city officials, who have prepared for the worst after seeing water consumption increase from 902 ac. ft. (87.5 percent) in 1982-83, to 97.8 percent in 1983-84.

The city has adopted a water conservation ordinance that restricts growth and sets aside most of the available water for new residential construction.

Roseth said that without the ordinance — amended in January to reflect more restrictions on business growth — the city would have exceeded its water allocation.

"The good news is that the water district will not be required to impose a development moratorium for at least another year," Roseth said.

"The other good news is that this has been our first year under the terms of our water ordinance and our water use increased only slightly although we had several new houses, developments and business licenses," he added.

"We increased, percentage-wise, less than any other city. That tells me that whatever restrictions we imposed work," Roseth said.

"I think it's a magnificent success."

BUT THERE is bad news, Roseth admitted.

"The bad news is that if we have another (dry rainfall) year like the last two, we'll probably pierce the cap in spite of our best efforts."

"The water supply allocation is based on a normal year of rainfall," Roseth said.

And Roseth is somewhat disappointed in city attempts to build a water reserve. Despite the ordinance and accompanying restrictions, the city has not added any water to its reserve.

"I think there has been less progress that the city would like to have seen, especially in the commercial district. All commercial properties are required to retrofit by 1994 and so far none have come forth to voluntarily do that," Roseth said.

About 600 residences have been retrofitted with the water saving devices for shower, toilet and faucets, Roseth said.

In response to the continuing dilemma, the council adopted in July an emergency amendment to the water conservation ordinance.

Previously, a loophole existed that allowed an operator of a high-water use business to open in place of a shop that consumed less water if the owner conserved water in another section of town.

For example, recently a beauty parlor was approved to replace an office when the salon owner retrofitted all businesses in the building.

However, the city did not save water. The retrofitting only preserved the status quo, Roseth said.

Thus, the council chose to eliminate that loophole.

The first challenge to the loophole closure will be Tuesday night when Mike Montana and Jim Newhouse appeal the board of adjustments decision to deny their use permit for Carmel Creamery, an ice cream parlor planned for the west side of Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues (former Back Pocket site).

THE ICE cream parlor application generated nationwide attention on Carmel because a board of adjustments committee recommended approval of the application only if ice cream cones are banned.

Later, that provision was dropped by the full board, which seemed more concerned about the water use issues.

The board of adjustments, in a special meeting Wednesday night, was expected to write the findings of fact necessary to support its denial. Results were unavailable at deadline.

Montana and Newhouse contend they will conserve sufficient water by opening a shoe store in place of Ocean Avenue restaurants Orange Julius and Swensen's, both of which are in the same building.

But the board of adjustments denied the application June 26, about a week before the July 2 council meeting when the loophole was closed by the council that would have allowed Carmel Creamery to open in return for closing Orange Julius and Swensen's.

Montana, in an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week, claimed his application should fall under the former guidelines.

"That order should not affect us because it came after the fact," Montana said.

Montana said he does not understand why the city all of a sudden chose to focus on water use.

All of the businesses in the building operate on one water meter, which is paid for by master leaseholder Dick Bruhn, Montana said.

"We're not taking another location. We're talking about the same water meter," he said.

Montana claims that even with Carmel

'The good news is that the water district will not be required to impose a development moratorium for at least another year,' Roseth said.

Creamery and the shoe store, the building will use 45 percent less water than what now is being consumed by Orange Julius and Swensen's.

"One of our complaints will be that water was discussed at the very first meeting. Since we were reducing water by 45 percent, it was not an issue."

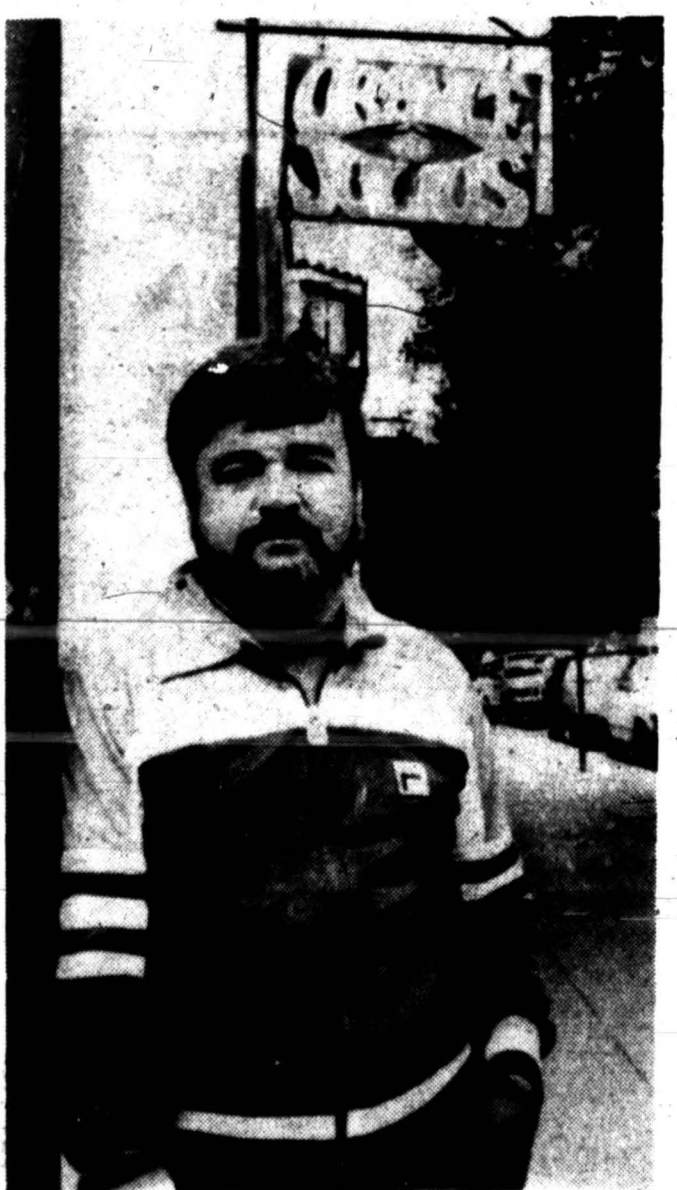

"It became an issue when we did not agree with their recommended restriction that we not sell ice cream cones."

Montana said a land use committee report stated the reduction of water use is "encouraged" by the city.

MONTANA ALSO is upset that the water issue came up as a surprise.

"We were given a paper on the water issue five minutes before our names were called (at the June 26 session)," he said. "We had to have our arguments in 24 hours a head of time."

Montana said the city has tried several

MICHAEL MONTANA will take his case to the city council Aug. 6 for permission to open his Carmel Creamery ice cream parlor. The city board of adjustments denied the use permit based on water usage while Montana contends the city did not alter its water conservation ordinance until after his application was denied. Montana also contends that he will save the city water by replacing Orange Julius and Swensen's with a shoe store. Recent figures indicate the city used 98.6 percent of its available water supply in 1984-85. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Boronda voters decide on finance mechanism for erosion program

By JOE MCGOWAN

ALL RIVERS have a natural tendency to meander, but the more one meanders the stronger the tendency. When water reaches a bend in the river, it strikes the outside of the bank, increasing the bend, and in the case of the Carmel River, washing away more local property at an accelerated pace.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has a plan to straighten out the Carmel River to the more stable shape it occupied in the mid-'60s, before erosion was excited by the lack of post-drought vegetation and the floods of the early '80s.

'We have been told over and over again that the only way is to have it dug nine feet into the river bank and now once the ballots are out, there has been a major change.'

The plan relies on mattress-shaped, gravel-filled barriers, called gabions, which direct the flow of the river back toward the center of the channel. Some criticize the project as too experimental. Others, including district representatives, claim it is a rare opportunity to curtail a lot of erosion for a small price.

To pay for the project, the district will get $100,000 from local and state agencies and apply for a grant of $150,000 from the Wildlife Conservation Board. The district hopes to raise another $150,000 from owners of property along the river in the Boronda area, where the first stage of the project will be constructed.

The proposed tax, based on riverfront footage, is being voted upon by registered voters — property owners as well as tenants — who live within the project boundaries in a mail-in ballot election which closed Aug. 6.

District representatives conducted a workshop last Wednesday at the Carmel Trail and Saddle Club and discussed both the election and the project, including some recent changes in design.

Nearly all who attended the meeting agreed the tax was a small price to pay if the system worked, but many speakers were skeptical of the uncertainties involved and outraged that the design for the system's main component, the gabion, was changed late in planning.

Originally, the district proposed anchoring the gabions in nine or more feet of river bank in order to reduce the "scouring effect" of the current. The new design, however, replaces the deep anchoring with a device called an "apron," which extends from 12 to 100 feet beyond the gabions, absorbing the scour effect and moving the scour holes away from the gabions. The apron design was not considered by the original environmental impact report but was recently adopted after the urging of newly hired district engineer Jim Finnigan.

Many locals are wary of the change. According to Tony de Sugny, who owns 17 percent of the property in question, "Many of us have not had much faith in the overall project. My concern is that we have been told over and over again that the only way is to have it dug nine feet into the river bank, and now once the ballots are out, there has been a major change."

Another speaker pointed out that 49 ballots, or approximately one-third of the total, were submitted before the date of the workshop, when most voters learned of the design change.

Margaret Lidstrom, president of the Carmel Trail and Saddle Club, commented,

"It's as if in the recall election they had said 'well, excuse me, but you were voting on a different person.'"

Finnigan said the district had changed the design because the apron method was more stable, cost less, and required far less digging in the river bank and no subsurface pumping. "It's not really that anything has changed, methods to keep the ice cream parlor out of town.

At one point the city tried to require him to provide parking in Red Eagle Lane when earlier the same board had ruled the parking legal.

In addition, the city rejected a proposed compromise on the ice cream cone issue, Montana alleges.

The compromise involved allowing Carmel Creamery to sell only single-cone scoops since most spillage occurs from double and triple-decker cones, he said. In addition, the restaurant would not allow takeout ice cream except for cones and would donate funds to help pay for the sidewalk cleaning in town.

"They had no comment on our offers of compromise," Montana said.

Roseth responded that he does not believe the city is wrong to deny the project based on water use even though the loophole was not officially closed until July.

"First of all, the ordinance that was on the books had specific purposes in mind. One of those was to establish a reserve," Roseth said.

Roseth pointed out that submission of an application does not grant "vested rights" to businesses. If an application is not approved, the city has a right to change ordinances without fear that the use must be allowed.

The water and Carmel Creamery issues are only two of the many agenda items before the council Aug. 6.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold wants the city to consider possible purchase of the former Grunion Run restaurant, south side of Fourth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

Arnold would like the city to consider operating a supply depot where large trucks would transfer goods to be delivered to merchants. The merchants then would come and get the supplies in smaller vehicles.

She believes the plan would help reduce some of the congestion on Carmel streets.

Stephenson said he is "willing to listen to any ideas."

"It's a good idea but it could concentrate traffic elsewhere," he said.

THE CITY at one time had considered buying the site — appraised at $960,000 — for parking, but that plan was dropped.

The council also will discuss the future of Flanders Mansion and Martin Road properties in Mission Trail Park.

The council agenda item is to consider hiring a broker to sell the sites. Flanders Mansion currently is leased to a private party and the Carmel Art Institute operated by John Cunningham.

The problem is that the city needs to repair the building, which will cost at least $360,000. The council seems unwilling to spend that kind of money on the building and would rather sell Flanders Mansion or tear it down.

Arnold is a firm opponent of any plan to have the city sell or demolish the property. She does not believe the city should sell park land.

In addition, Arnold does not want the city to "boot out" the Carmel Art Institute.

"I don't think we have a financial need to do that. Once it's gone we wouldn't have any options," she said.

"I'm very much opposed to pulling the plug out on John Cunningham. It's the last accredited school in Carmel. To boot out John Cunningham would be reprehensible."

Stephenson said the agenda item needs to be altered because it indicates the council has decided to sell the mansion and Martin Road property when no such formal decision has occurred.

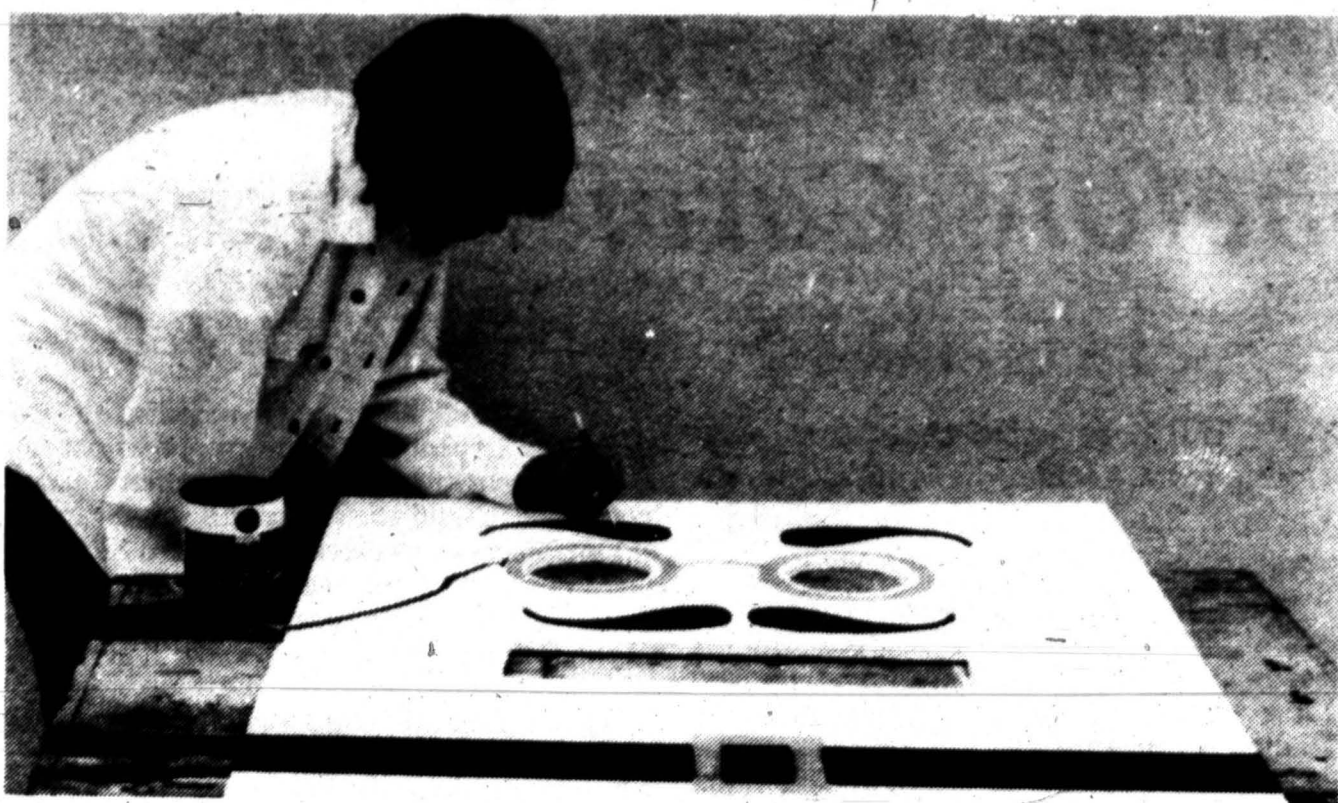

"It makes it sound like we've already made up our minds. I haven't made up my mind whether or not to sell it," he said.

In other matters, the council is to:

- Appoint new members to the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees and Carmel Community and Cultural Commission.

- Consider an ordinance to formalize the beginnings of a police reserve program.

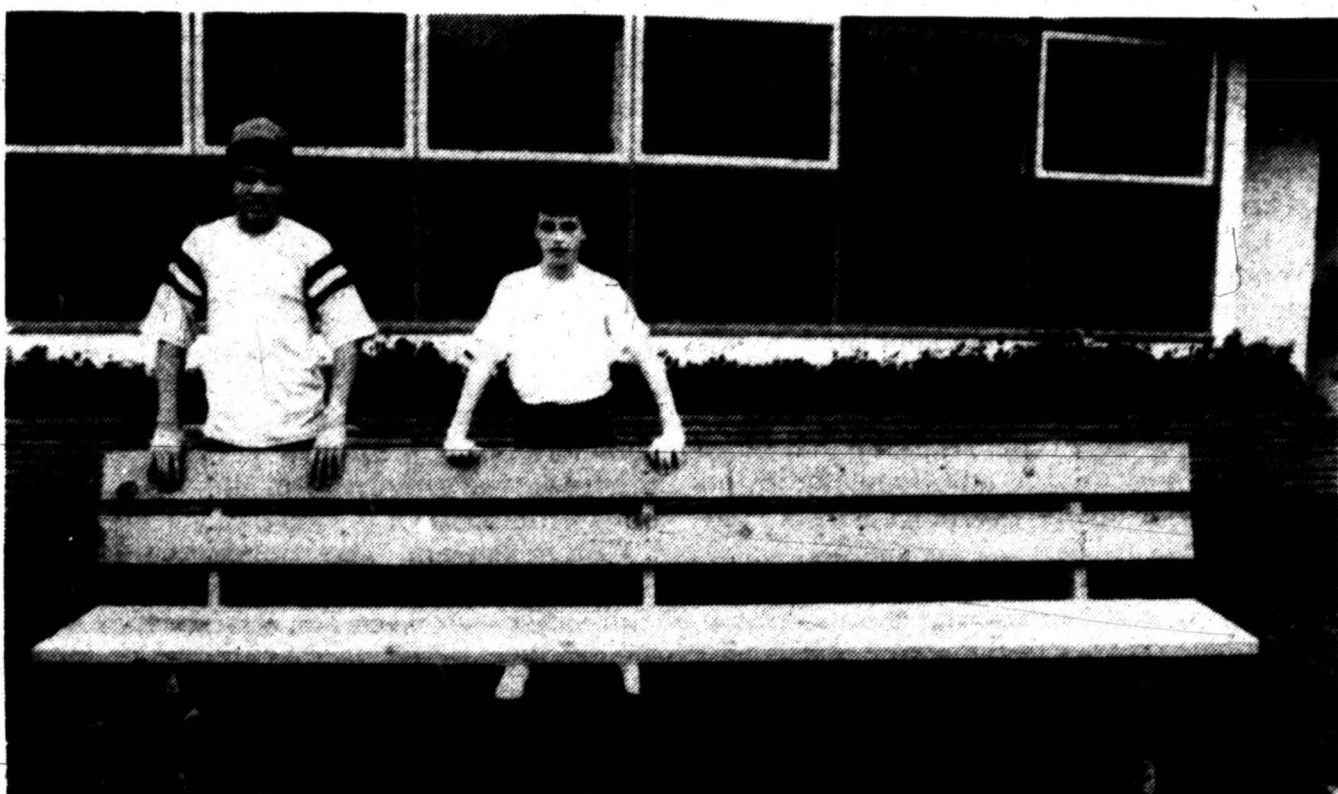

- Deny a claim filed by Paul Laub that asks the city to return $1.3 million in parking fees and overtime fines to the city.

River School students aid campus

SEVERAL CARMEL River School students have participated in a special summer program that has provided an educational learning experience along with a few needed items for the campus. Patrick Allen's class received about $200 in donations from the parent club thanks to the efforts of representative Audrey Zerbe. The students used those donations to buy materials to build two benches, a sign for the school (the lettering will be done separately), plus some other special class projects. The students learned construction skills, safe machine use and math while putting the projects together. Above, Ty Brooks worked on his game project for motor skills development while below Alex Ramos (left) and Justin Rowlette previewed one of the two benches built by the class that are to be located by the office. # Littles to plead case before Carmel council

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IT WILL be up to the Carmel City Council to decide the future of the Carmel Sands Lodge and Simpson's restaurant.

The Little family, which proposes to demolish and rebuild the complex on the northeast corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue, will plead their case before the council in September.

The Littles were rebuffed by the planning commission July 24 on a 4-3 vote and now will appeal to the council.

In opposition to the use permit were chairman Gene Cava and commissioners Sandy Swain, John Logan and Marjorie Montelius. Commissioners who voted in favor of the application were Tom Nash, Gene Hammond and Arthur Mertens.

The Littles have not asked for an expansion of the number of hotel rooms (42) or restaurant seats (120). The family does ask to add a 3,000 sq. ft. office building for their insurance business. However, the site would be enlarged from five to eight lots.

Commissioners who oppose the project basically fear that they will set a precedent by allowing a tourist-oriented use that does not comply with current density standards to be completely rebuilt downtown.

Those who support the project stated that the Littles simply will rebuild the complex without any increase in motel rooms or restaurant seats. They also point to the additional parking to be provided as a public benefit.

The office building is a permitted use and therefore the Littles could develop that phase of the project on the additional three lots separate from the lodge and restaurant complex.

The Little application is a complicated affair and the nearly two-hour discussion last week further added to the complex issues.

Following a series of votes July 24, and previous decisions, the status of the project is varied depending on which phase is considered.

The Littles have city permission to demolish the complex. However, that permit is contingent on the family obtaining a use permit to rebuild the lodge and restaurant.

One recent road block was cleared by commissioners last week when they approved a plan by the Littles to offer 78 parking spaces, plus valet parking during peak traffic times of 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

At one time the commission considered a requirement that the Littles provide about 100 spaces through more parking in the underground garage and valet service.

ON A unanimous vote, the commission approved the Littles' parking plan. But that was the only victory for the family.

On subsequent 4-3 votes, the commission rejected the proposed rebuilding of the lodge and restaurant.

After the meeting, family spokesman Matt Little told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that an appeal will be filed.

"We expect to file an appeal. We haven't worked out the details of that," he said. "We think some members of the planning commission don't fully appreciate what we're trying to do. Our only choice is to appeal."

One of the issues in the application is the so-called 1,000 sq. ft. rule for motels.

The city, up until adoption of a sweeping commercial zoning ordinance last year, mandated that all motels be required to provide 1,000 sq. ft. of space for each unit.

However, that rule was eliminated in the central-commercial (CC) and service-commercial (SC) zones and replaced by a provision that simply states that "additional units prohibited."

Commissioners who oppose the project believe that the rule should never have been eliminated and asked for staff to look into the problem.

The Carmel Sands project — because it was in existence before the one room to 1,000

A MAINTENANCE worker cleaned the pool at the Carmel Sands Lodge in a quiet scene at the motel on San Carlos Street. The city council in September is expected to determine whether the Little family can demolish the motel and restaurant, and completely rebuild the complex. (Michael Gardner photo.)

sq. ft. rule was adopted — could keep its 42 units despite a density of one unit for each 476 sq. ft.

With the site expansion from five to eight lots, the Little family proposals to actually decrease the motel density to one room per each 762 sq. ft.

Commissioners who oppose the application do not want the Carmel Sands Lodge project to be exempted from the one room to 1,000 sq. ft. requirement.

Former Mayor Gunnar Norberg was the only member of the audience to oppose the application. Norberg was on the council when the 1,000 sq. ft. per room rule was adopted.

"It was to save Carmel from an overflow of transients," he told the commission.

Norberg believes that the elimination of the rule is "an appalling nightmare."

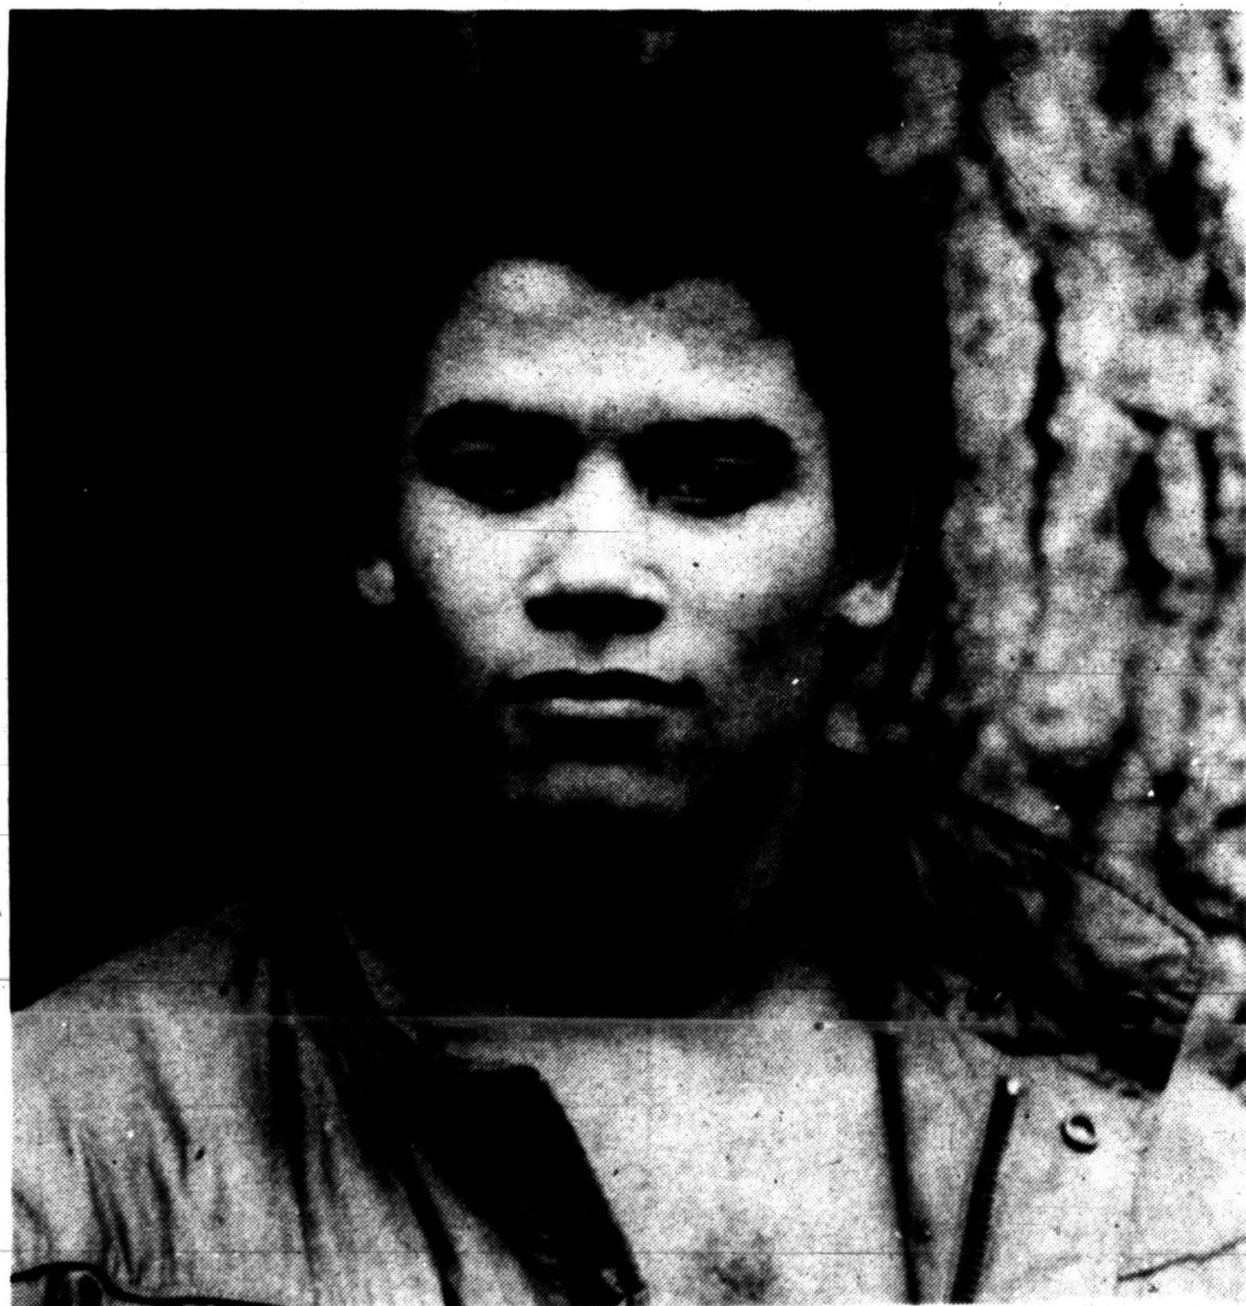

He said to grant an exclusion for the Little family would be setting a precedent. "That is a fantastic Pandora's box that you will open."

"Now the applicant is asking for the moon and if he gets it then you will have 10 or 20 or 30 hotels...which will be lining up for permits to do the same things."

The Little family has indicated that they cannot understand why the city is opposed to the project.

The application does not increase the number of rooms or restaurant seats, provides far more parking spaces (78) than what is required (51), and also will increase open space on the site, they say.

Commissioner Swain later said that she could be convinced to vote for the project if the Littles would scale down the complex and also reduce the number of restaurant seats.

Padre cheerleaders win two awards

CARMEL HIGH School cheerleaders swept two of the most coveted awards at a recently-concluded summer clinic at the University of Santa Barbara.

The varsity cheerleaders received the "award of excellence," which invites them to the National High School Championships in December at Disney World in Florida.

This year two squad members — seniors Brenna Gardner and Lori Palma — also received the "All-American Cheerleader Award," which invites them to participate in the pre-game and halftime ceremonies at the Aloha Bowl football game to be in December in Hawaii.

The Carmel varsity and junior varsity also were the winners of the clinic's newest honor, the "California Association of Directors of Spirit Camp Squad Leadership Award."

This award recognizes the school that demonstrates the most outstanding leadership at camp.

Fund-raising activities are underway and merchants or service organizations that would like to assist can contact cheerleader advisor Deidi Kramer at 624-1507.

Neighborhood Watch reduces crime

By JOE MCGOWAN

IF YOU SAW a strange person lurking around your neighbor's house (and it wasn't your neighbor) would you call the police? If not, perhaps you should do some re-thinking.

Deputy Dave Allard, who heads the Neighborhood Watch unit for the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, said a surprising number of neighbors see suspicious circumstances, yet don't tell anyone until an officer knocks on their door the next day.

He said a court of law recognizes that a neighbor is the most qualified person to detect a burglary due to his or her familiarity with an area. Allard insisted, however, that Neighborhood Watch does not involve peeking at hot tub parties or other forms of nosiness, but is rather a kind of general awareness and a means of communication with local law enforcement.

Innovative crime-fighting techniques are finding increasingly widespread use on both the state and local levels, Deputy Allard said. The Monterey County Sheriff's Department has followed the lead of California Atty. Gen. John Van de Kamp in grouping several such programs under the Neighborhood Watch program. These include rural crime prevention; Operation Identification, which makes property easily identifiable; and the organization of neighborhoods to protect against crime, or what is normally thought of as Neighborhood Watch.

Allard said that in the unincorporated areas of Carmel and Carmel Valley alone, the number of burglaries last year approached an average of 15 per month.

He also made it clear, however, that such a diverse area as Monterey County requires great flexibility. "Neighborhood Watch is a community-based program. We don't have minimum standards. It's really (based on) what interest is generated by the group. We only require they organize at least 12 to 15 people together. We've had groups as small as five houses, and our biggest single group is Pebble Beach.

When a group expresses the desire to form a Neighborhood Watch, Allard arranges a meeting. "How to identify and report crime is part of what we cover at these meetings," he said. "When you do see suspicious things, write it down. Many people have an incredible reluctance to call us, perhaps because on its face value what they see is not inherently criminal, and they're unwilling to accuse anybody of a crime."

Also taught at the meetings are low-cost techniques for protecting your own home — for example, checking the installation of bolts and locks.

"If you have an improperly installed lock it's just as bad as having no lock at all," Allard said. He described how most deadbolts are anchored with surprisingly short screws, allowing them to be kicked out with the "proportionate amount of energy as it takes to break a pencil with your fingers."

However, if the small task of replacing the short screws with longer ones is performed, "the odds are that an intruder's knee would go out before the door can be broken in. We particularly emphasize the inexpensive things. Improving the screws probably doubles the security of your house to the point where you probably won't get burglarized."

ANOTHER low cost technique he recommends is having your street address at an easily identifiable location. "Just having a number on a mailbox when there are eight mailboxes doesn't help us much if someone's choking or has a burglar," he said.

"I don't know one guy out there on patrol who doesn't want to get to a call as fast as he possibly can. You can imagine the frustration when it takes 15 minutes to find your house."

Allard said he complements the standard Neighborhood Watch meetings with other more creative events, for example Operation I.D. day.

"If a Neighborhood Watch group is willing to organize it, we're willing to set up a station in their neighborhood to check out engravings," he said. "We'll be right there to answer any questions. If it's done right you can get everybody's valuables engraved with an identifiable number in a couple of hours. The same thing can be done for fingerprinting kids."

DEPUTY Monterey County Sheriff Dave Allard said the Neighborhood Watch program has been effective in reducing the crime ratio in unincorporated areas of the county.

His department also has a number of ideas to prevent rural crime such as edible confetti, which is marked with a number that can be identified all around the country and mixed in with grain and hay to identify stolen livestock.

Allard stressed that communication is an important aspect of Neighborhood Watch.

"The groups are almost an ideal medium for getting emergency word out. Let's say we had to do an evacuation. The Neighborhood Watch program could be the medium for services. If they're worried about arson we could call a joint meeting with the fire department," he said.

"We would handle the crime aspect and the fire department could say what to do if the flames are going over your hill. It's amazing what could be done with a little forethought. Where to park the cars so they don't burn up, where to put the animals, we could find these things out."

Allard explained how effective the Neighborhood Watch program can be in practice. The community of Oak Hills in north Monterey County was "victimized by a series of 16 burglaries during a six-week period." After the fifth week of burglaries, citizens called Allard about having a Neighborhood Watch meeting. "We really pulled together," he said. "After the meetings began there was only one burglary in the next six months."

The following neighborhoods are involved in Neighborhood Watch: Carmel Views, Rippling River, Los Tularies, Rancho Rio Vista, Valley Way, Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club Homeowners, Rancho Canada, Via Cereno and Pebble Beach.

Allard said the Valley Way group had a joint meeting with his department and the Carmel police. "It can work even if you can't put up big signs. The criminal will be aware that you're aware of criminal activities just by how well you secure your home, and then they go somewhere else."

Barracudas celebrate fund-raising

THE BARRACUDA Aquatics of the Monterey Peninsula club celebrated another successful "Waterama" fund-raising event with a special party at the Carmel Valley home of coach Larry Challis July 27. The star of the party was a 30-ft. banana split (above). Exact funds raised were unavailable. The party followed a dual meet 707-482 win over the Salinas Y Swim Club at the Carmel High School pool. With the win the Barracudas finished an undefeated dual meet season and now will compete in the Coast Valley Aquatics meet Aug. 9-11 at the Soquel High School pool in Soquel. At the Carmel High School meet, Kyle Nichols shattered team records and finished with two "PRT's," which is the best time category in swimming meets. Many Carmel area swimmers finished in the "A" and "AA" time categories, including: Courtney Brockman, Aaron Gaily, Matt Smith, Bryan Langley, Jenny Wolf, Mike Falge, Becky Roveto, Jennifer Johnson, Adam Stiles and Lauren Johnson.

A TRACK tower was built by volunteers over five Saturdays to assist the research efforts of the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary.

A PRAIRIE falcon is readied for its eventual release as part of a research project conducted by the U.C. Santa Cruz Predatory Bird Research Group and the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary.

Two prairie falcons released at wildlife sanctuary site

TWO PRAIRIE falcons were recently released from a "hawk tower" on the 240-acre Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary by sanctuary director Glenn R. Stewart.

The project initiated a three-year radio telemetry wildlife tracking program that will first test the research methods on non-endangered prairie falcons and then follow the movements of endangered peregrine falcons from the central coast release site.

Under a cooperative program with the U.C. Santa Cruz Predatory Bird Research Group, Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary will conduct the studies from its remote field station in Anderson Canyon overlooking the Big Sur coast.

"Peregrine" means wanderer, and it has long been a research interest of endangered species biologists to determine the extent of the birds' movements. Pesticide contamination continues to threaten the peregrine falcon with extinction, so added knowledge of their behavior will hopefully provide new management direction and assist with the species' recovery.

The prairie falcons are fitted with a newly developed backpack radio-telemetry unit that weighs only 11 grams — or about one-third of one ounce. The tiny transmitter emits a directional signal that can be received by a hand-held radio and antenna up to 15 miles away.

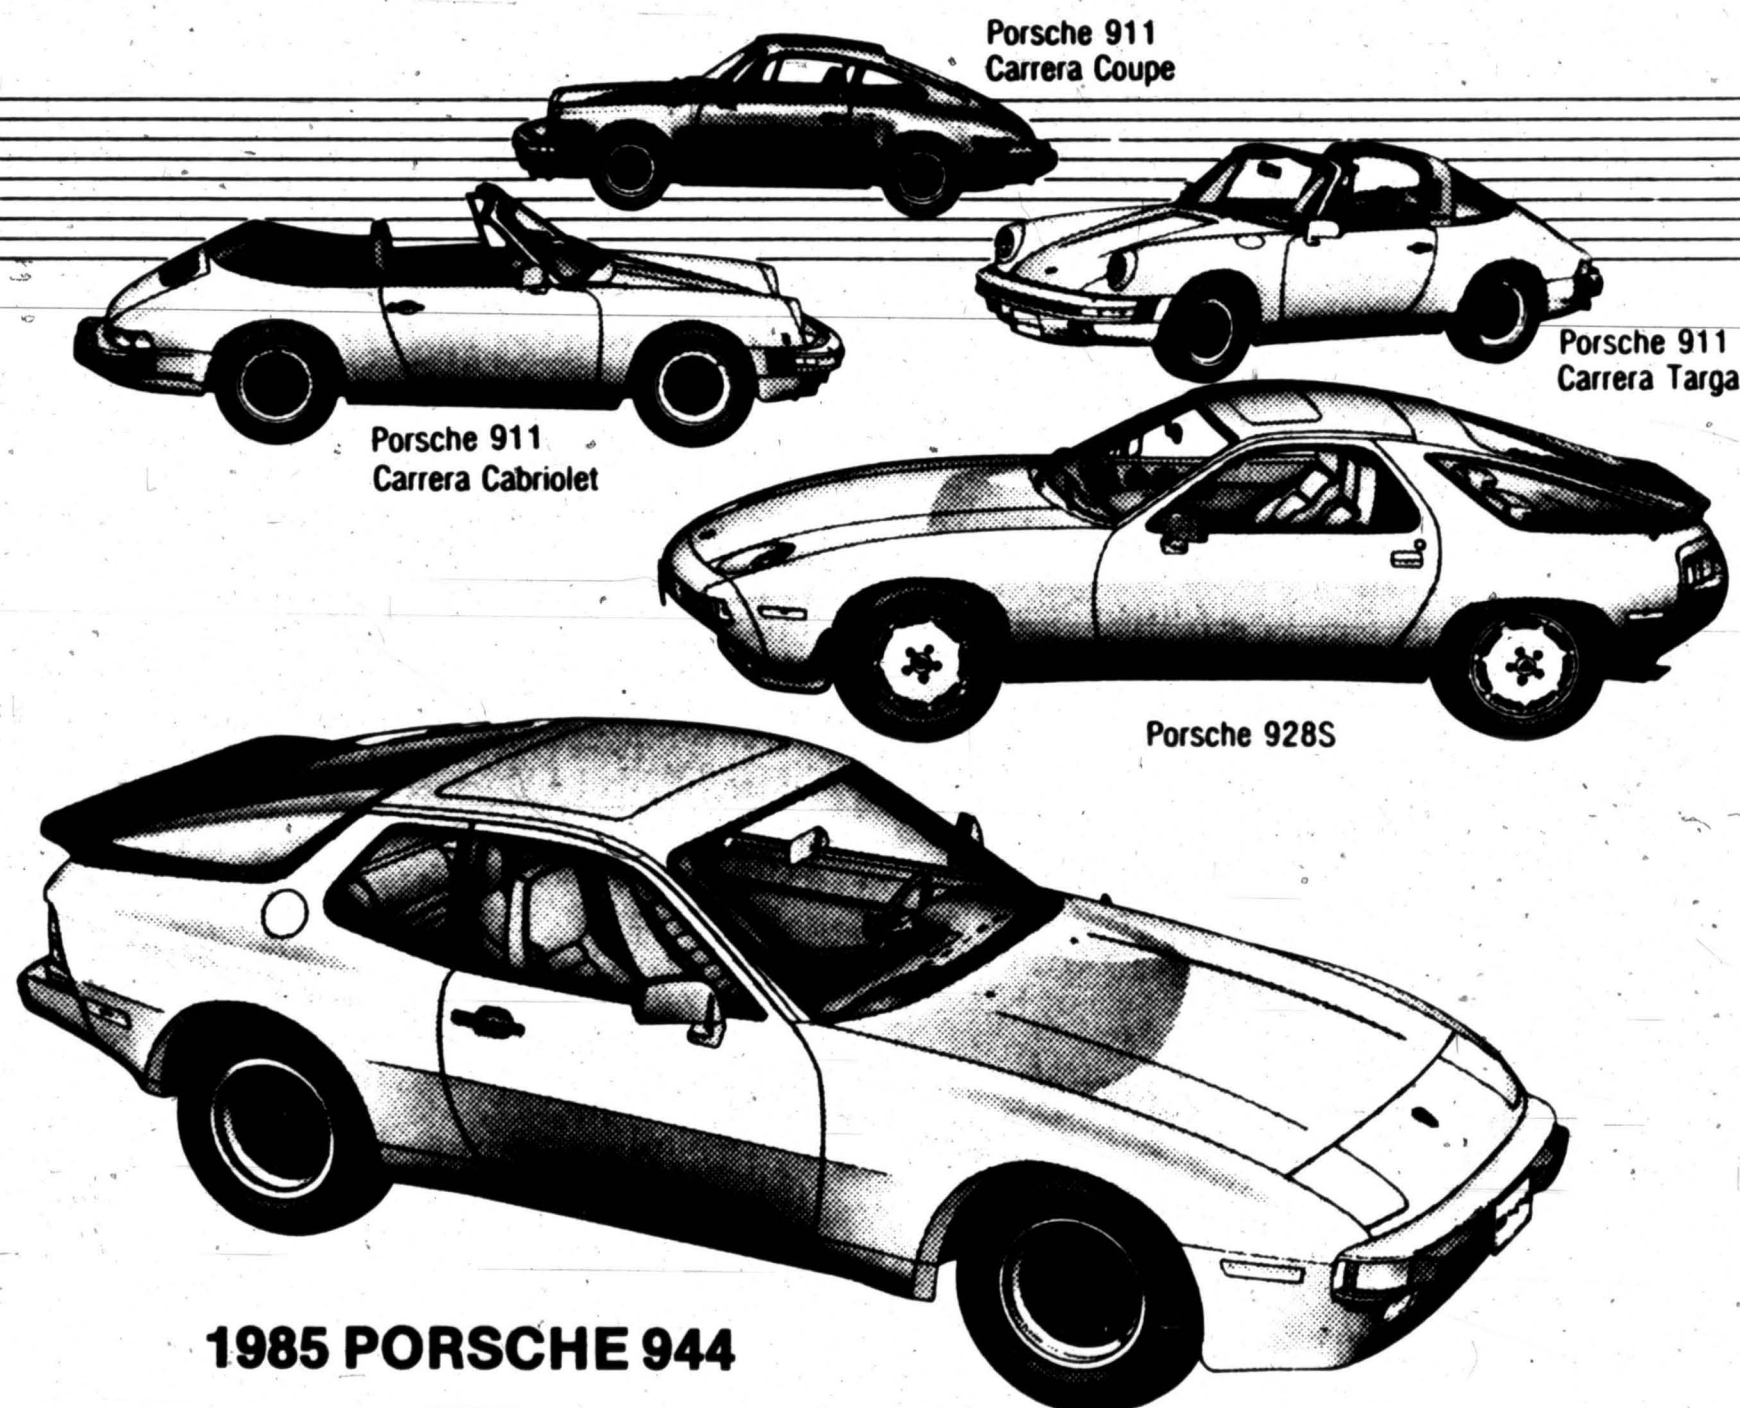

The lightning-caused "Rat Creek" fire passed through the Anderson Canyon study area burning mostly underbrush and about 30 percent of the trees. One of the falcons perished in the fire.

Stewart reports that the other falcon is doing fine and is being monitored at the site by attending biologists. The research will continue in spite of the fire damage.

"Wildfire is a natural part of the coastal zone ecosystem that has a longterm, beneficial effect upon wildlife because of the lush regeneration of grasses and shrubs that sprout in the wake of such devastation," Stewart said. "The temporary drop in wildlife populations should be followed by a general resurgence. We will probably encounter a higher level of human inconvenience after the burn because of mudslides and down timber."

CV voters to decide recreation district

VOTERS WHO reside within the boundaries of the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District will receive mail ballots within the next few weeks on whether a special parks and recreation district should be established.

The approximately 3,000 voters must return their ballots to the Monterey County Elections Department by Aug. 20.

At issue is whether property owners within the fire district should be assessed $45 per parcel annually to pay for the proposed parks and recreation district. Commercial properties would be taxed at a slightly lower rate depending on the type of business.

The measure, which would be effective for five years, must be approved by two-thirds of those voting to be adopted.

The primary responsibility of the parks and recreation district will be to continue operations at the Carmel Valley Community Center off Ford Road.

On the same ballot are seven candidates who seek five seats on the proposed parks and recreation district board of directors, which would be established in the event the tax is approved.

The seven candidates are: Ron Scholl, Debbie Saxton, Chuck Bosso, Chuck McKay, Kate Rosenthal, Randy Randazzo and Graham Matthews.

The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center Board of Directors has not endorsed candidates, but has mailed a flyer to voters urging approval of the measure.

"It is of vital importance to the operation of the community center that there be a continued source of operating funds," the directors stated in the flyer.

"For more than 30 years the center has operated on funds coming mainly from donations, grants and fund raisers. However, those were the times when the population in the area was smaller, use of the center was less intensive and the demands for new programs and facilities were not as great.

"With the operating budget soon to exceed $100,000 per year the traditional sources of funds will soon become insufficient to provide the recreational services needed by the community."

The board states that the measure will provide needed funds for improvements, such as public restrooms; and new and expanded programs.

The letter was signed by board members Dan Gladney, Bob Heald, Dan Saxton and Fred Slabaugh.

New Ticketron outlet opens

The YMCA Visitor Information Center, located at Webster Street and Camino El Estero in Monterey, is the site of a new Ticketron outlet.

Tickets for the Monterey Bay Aquarium, Hearst Castle, state and national parks and cultural and sporting events throughout the United States may be purchased there.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday. The exception is campsite reservations which go on sale at 10:15 a.m. weekdays and are not available for sale weekends.

Tickets are sold over the counter on a cash basis. No telephone or credit card sales will be accepted.

JAZZ NOTES

BY ROBERT MISKIMON

Videos capture live bands

JAZZ LOVERS who thrill when rare collector's recordings of the masters are re-released and who long to see, as well as hear, those legendary musicians can take heart.

As part of the burgeoning market in home videotapes, the visual as well as aural needs of jazz fans can now be satisfied.

Oh, sure, there's the bit part by Louis Armstrong in High Society and the gag scene in Blazing Saddles where the Count Basie Band is found swinging madly in the middle of some godforsaken desert.

But those rare cinematic moments tended more to exploit than to expose the jazz musician, and hardly ever presented him in his natural setting — playing before a live and appreciative audience.

Kartes Video Communications, Inc. of Indianapolis, Ind. has released its spring/summer catalogue of videotapes — among them a collection of live recordings by the likes of Count Basie, Lionel Hampton, Harry James, Glenn Miller, Tex Beneke, Gene Krupa, Jimmy Dorsey, Duke Ellington and Stan Kenton.

Although the selection, to date, is almost exclusively from the big band era, future releases may include performances by small combos from the "cool" era, according to Kartes spokeswoman Marlene Lambert.

One sample of these videotapes is The Big Bands, Vol. 108, which features 1965 performances by the bands of Count Basie, Duke Ellington, and Lionel Hampton.

In what appear to be kinescope recordings of live television performances, we see Count Basie giving gentle but solidly persuasive direction to his musicians in such renderings as One O'Clock Jump, I Can't Stop Loving You, April in Paris, Jumpin' at the Woodside, and others.

"You folks may not be able to dance to this one," the Count announces to the assembled fans on the dance floor in mini-skirts, narrow lapels and string ties as the band tears into a fast-paced number.

We see Lionel Hampton dominate the bandstand with his infectious enthusiasm, bobbing back and forth over his vibraphone, dancing ecstatically as he plays, then taking over the drums for a searing exposition of what it means to be "into" the music. The Hampton band plays Broadway, Cute, Hamp's Boogie and Airmail Special.

With the Duke Ellington band, the treat is not only seeing and hearing the Duke but also witnessing his stellar sidemen in full flight.

Here's the Duke caressing the keyboard as the camera pans to the likes of Johnny Hodges; other legendary jazzmen in their own right hover just out of focus as the band works its way through Take the 'A' Train, Rockin' in Rhythm, Satin Doll and Do Nothing 'Til You Hear from Me, among others.

Although the films are in black and white and the sound is of less than startling fidelity, the pleasure is in seeing and hearing these great bands — with their leaders — in live performance.

At $19.95, these musical videotapes last about 50 minutes. They are available in book stores, or directly from Kartes Video, 10 E. 106th St., Indianapolis, Ind. 46280.

Boronda voters to decide on river erosion program

it's just that the construction technique is simpler."

Pat Bernardi, chairman of the district board, explained why the decision was late. "It's like buying a computer. The technology changes very quickly."

There were other questions concerning the project as a whole. One speaker asked what effect the gabions might have on down-cutting, a process in which debris from upstream cuts away from the downstream areas. Finnigan answered, "If we return the river to the same width as in 1965, we can't expect any more down-cutting than in 1965."

Another speaker asked if material to fill the gabions would be removed from the river bed. Finnigan said that the material would be removed only from bars in the river, and that the armor shell of the bed would remain intact. He added "Part of the project is excavation of material in the center. This excavation will not be complete; we want to let the river do most of the excavation, because it's very expensive."

Finnigan stressed that the gabions were not necessarily a means of flood control. "They are and they aren't. They will aid in flood control by stabilizing the banks during the lesser storms, but if a 10-year storm hits, they will not do anything to the water level."

Nor will the gabions last forever. "They're intended to last only long enough to let the vegetation catch, and then the vegetation becomes the primary source of bank protection." The first step will be the planting of willows up through the apron structure. Bruce Buel, the district manager, said complete vegetation won't occur for 20 years.

Although the plan could have long-term significance, it all depends on crucial events in the next few months. Finnigan outlined the many obstacles standing in the way of the plan's completion. Besides voter approval, the district must obtain permits from state fish and game officials and the County of Monterey.

The district also relies on the grant of $150,000 from the Wildlife Conservation Board. Finnigan said the board was interested in the project, because the gabions would promote steelhead survival. "The structures would create small scour pools and a gravel riverbed, which are ideal for steelhead." He said the chances of obtaining this grant were "pretty good. When you get approval from one agency the whole thing tends to snowball."

THE NEXT step would be for the board to obtain construction easements from property owners. Buel said condemnation and confiscation was one route the district could pursue, but not the most favorable one.

"One problem with condemnation is that we can't accurately predict how much it's going to cost us. If we take possession of property, the case goes to court and an independent estimator determines the price. Although it doesn't seem that the land in the riverbed is worth much, you never can tell."

The final potential barrier faced by the district is perhaps the most difficult to predict: weather. Construction is scheduled to begin on Oct. 1 and end on Nov. 30. According to hydrologist Graham Matthews, if the rains come before this time, construction must be rescheduled for the following year. However, if the rains occur during the construction, "we would normally have at least a day's notice. If there's a whole lot of rain we can yank the gabions out, but if there is less we can create a diversion channel" and continue work when the rain stops.

Although construction was set back partly by a postponement in the Wildlife Conservation Board decision, Matthews claimed that the district intended the construction to take place late in the year for good reason. "We anticipated that the riverbed would be driest at this time of the year, and that way we won't have to deal with water flowing in the channel."

At one point in the workshop Matthews commented that it was his opinion that if the project was not constructed this year, there

WINSTON AUCUTT of Pebble Beach (above) and Laurie Husby of Carmel braved dark and rain-slickened trails to seek help for a group of men who had been hit by lightning on Half Dome in Yosemite. (Michael Gardner photos.)

Husby, a 1985 Carmel High School graduate, and Aucutt, who was graduated from Carmel Valley High School this year, ran more than four miles down the trail in the dark of night to seek help at the Little Yosemite Valley ranger station.

Led by teacher Richard Fletcher, the students and chaperones were in Yosemite as part of an eight-day program to learn camping and backpacking skills.

On the final day of their trip the students and chaperones had decided on an overnight hike to the top of Half Dome that would be the perfect climax to a thrilling week in Yosemite.

ON THE way up Husby and Friday stopped at a spring for fresh water. There they encountered two men, who they later found out were Esteban and Weiner.

"Laurie told them they shouldn't go up. One of the guys was cocky. He said he had been up there in rain and hail and snow. He said to Laurie 'I'm okay, how's your karma?' We just left it at that," recalled Friday in an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Monday night.

As storm clouds gathered overhead, Fletcher became fearful they would be caught in the rains half-way up the treacherous trail — accessible only by pulling yourself up on a cable — so he ordered the group to make camp on the mountain shoulder.

The two men passed the camp again at about 5 p.m. and were again warned by members of the Carmel group that they shouldn't proceed as the storm clouds grew darker. Their warnings went unheeded.

The thunder rolled, the rains came and several lightning bolts flashed across the sky for nearly two hours. Suddenly, the storm cleared.

In search of the magnificent sunset view only Half Dome can offer, a few members of the Carmel group decided to finish the hike while it was still light.

"The storm stopped at about 6:30 and I decided to go for a walk to see the sunset," said Friday, who graduated from Carmel High School in 1982.

Carmel students help victims at Yosemite

Friday was a fateful 15 minutes ahead of her friends as she arrived at the peak.

"A couple of guys yelled out: 'Hey you, come here.' I thought they were just partying so I ignored them," Friday said. "They yelled again and by that time I realized something was wrong."

"Two men were lying there. They were burned. Adrian seemed okay but Bruce was pretty bad off. Tom looked like he had paralyzed legs."

By this time Lester, Miller and several other Carmel High students arrived on the scene. Lester sent the students away, but by then they had seen the victims.

"I helped Adrian and Mike (one of the two UC, Davis emergency medical technicians) pull Bruce out of the cave. We had to pick him up and put a sleeping bag under him. I had to go back to the cave to get a sleeping bag. The young man in the cave (16-year-old Jordan) was dead."

Friday said somehow she remained calm. "I was totally calm, but my adrenalin was high. I was totally calm. I was upset, but I was calm."

FRIDAY SAID "Adrian just kept talking about what happened."

Adrian told Friday that Jordan was knocked unconscious and apparently killed immediately by the lightning.

"(Frith) got struck in the face by the lightning. He was convulsing. Adrian was grabbing on to him. His shirt ripped and he fell off (the cliff)," Friday said.

With the two emergency medical technicians on the scene to assist the injured, Friday was sent down to bring back a first aid kit and other supplies.

By then night had fallen and the trail was slippery from the rains. The only way up or down Half Dome is by a steep path. The hiker has to pull himself up and down by using a steel cable strung along the steep face of the rock.

Friday grasped the cable and made her way to the shoulder camp where the rest of the group awaited.

"Brutus (Lester) sent me down the hill to get supplies. I ran down the hill. I was scared. The first time I went up (before she saw the accident) I was scared," she said.

Fletcher, meanwhile, had stayed at the shoulder camp to calm the students.

"It was the first time they had seen dead people or people screaming in pain," Fletcher said. "There was a lot of shock and grieving."

Friday was faced with climbing back up Half Dome with the supplies in hand.

"I don't know how I made it back up there. It was awfully dark. It was insane,"

'I never want to go back. I had to go in the cave a couple of times with the young man dead in there. They didn't take the body away until the morning.'

she said. Back at the scene, Friday then sent S.O.S. signals via flashlight to the valley floor.

Aucutt had climbed the peak with fellow student Alan Pickett and Lester. "When we got there Jymie came over. Oh, my God, what's going on?, we asked her. We went over to the rim and saw what was going on," Aucutt said.

"One guy started screaming when they tried to take his boots off," he said.

Aucutt climbed back down to the shoulder camp where Fletcher asked whether Aucutt thought he could make it to the valley floor for help. Fletcher couldn't go because he was the only adult chaperone at the shoulder camp.

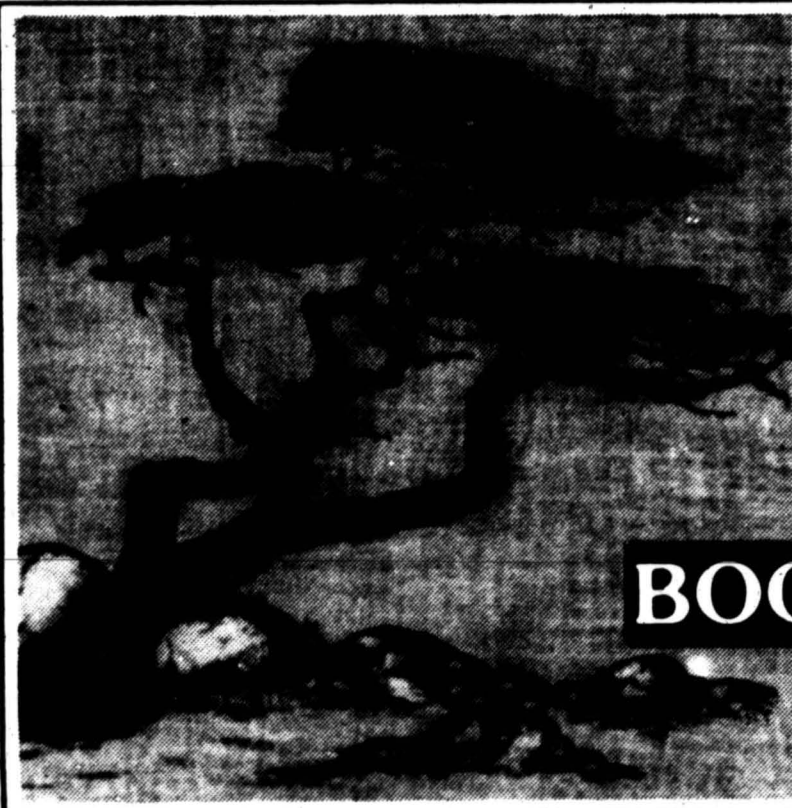

"I had gone down last year so I knew my way. I was pretty nervous at this point and I didn't want to go down alone," he said. Husby volunteered to go with him and the pair ran the more than four miles to the ranger station for help. By then, hours had passed after the men had been struck by lightning. Aucutt and Husby then helped the rangers carry supplies back up the mountain, but they stayed at the shoulder camp for the night.

RESCUE helicopters did not arrive until after midnight, Friday said. First they took Weiner. Rice was the next to be rescued followed by the less-seriously injured Esteban. Because of the darkness, the helicopters did not take Jordan's body out of the cave until morning, Friday said. Friday, Lester and Miller huddled together on the peak, too weary and emotionally drained to attempt to climb down to the shoulder camp. By this time it was 2 a.m., eight hours after Friday had first stumbled on the accident. The three climbed down at the break of day to join their equally-somber friends at the shoulder camp.

"The next morning I just wanted to get away," said Friday. "I never want to go back. I had to go in the cave a couple of times with the young man dead in there. They didn't take the body away until the morning." Lester, in a telephone interview, recalled his view of what happened that day. "We met those hikers earlier in the day. They went by us on their way up to the dome," said Lester, who has chaperoned the Carmel trips for several years. "We advised them not to go. They ignored all the signs," he said. "Two large bolts hit the dome...15 to 20 minutes apart. "It was clear they shouldn't have been there. There are signs everywhere. We were on the shoulder clear of any danger. We were never in any danger," Lester said. Lester and the others climbed the peak after the storm to view the sunset. They saw one dead body and three others who were injured. They were told of Frith falling off the peak. As Lester reconstructed the events, the men had climbed into a cave seeking shelter. "That's no place to go because you end up being a conductor," he said. "When the lightning first hit, one ended up going into convulsions (Jordan). "A guy named Adrian climbed out and tried to get his friend out (Frith). The second bolt hit and a portion of the electrical charge hit the guy (Frith) in the forehead and Adrian, in fear of his own life, had to let go of him." Frith fell to his death. Lester called Friday's late-night dash for supplies down the face of the peak a "heroic hike" and had similar words of praise for Aucutt and Husby's race to the valley floor for help.

LESTER BELIEVES that Rice and Weiner could have died if it were not for the courage of the ROP program students. In describing the emotional state of the rest of the group, Lester said: "Our students were just shocked. Half of the group was with us and actually saw the accident." The bus trip home was a sad several hours for the group. "People were very somber and kept to themselves. You saw a lot of delayed stress, especially Jym," Aucutt said. For Friday, the stress did not hit her until Monday when she was able to spend time talking about the incident with her mother. By evening, she was searching for something positive out of the experience. "It just made me realize that life is short. Something can happen any time. You have to look for the positive," she said.

Judge orders new Rancho San Carlos hearings

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHEN THE Monterey County Board of Supervisors was led by Michal Moore and William Peters, it came under constant criticism for railroading projects without due process because of its pro-development attitude.

Cases in point include the controversies over the Big Sur Land Use Plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan, the Spanish Bay resort in Del Monte Forest and the Pebble Beach Community Services District wastewater treatment plan — all issues involved in extensive litigation over land use and public hearing process issues.

The complaints were all filed by cities, citizens or other public agencies that charge supervisors either allowed too much development or did not follow due process.

The Rancho San Carlos development provides a different twist, however.

As one of their last actions before their terms expired in December 1983, the usually pro-development Moore and Peters pushed through perhaps the most restrictive zoning possible for the ranch, a 20,000-acre spread in the hills east of Carmel Valley Road stretching from approximately Highway 1 to the village.

Rancho San Carlos owner Arthur Oppenheimer had applied for zoning that would allow up to 3,800 homes, service-related businesses and a hotel on the property.

The planning commission had recommended permissive zoning for up to 2,000 homes and a hotel on 2,500 acres with the stipulation that the remaining property remain undeveloped.

But supervisors as part of their adoption of the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan enacted zoning density of one unit per 160 acres, which would allow for a mere 125 homes to be developed on the entire 20,000 acres.

Ironically, this time it was the developer who filed a court challenge to the decision based on complaints of failure to follow due process. And in this case, the developer charged supervisors with over-restrictive zoning as compared to the usual complaints from the city of Carmel and environmentalists that the board allowed too much building.

Oppenheimer apparently has won his case. In a decision handed down Thursday, July

MONTEREY COUNTY Superior Court Judge Harkjoon Paik has ruled that the 25, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Harkjoon Paik ordered supervisors to reopen hearings on the zoning for Rancho San Carlos.

PAIK RULED ruled that the board had violated state guidelines by imposing "substantial modifications" in the zoning without first giving the county planning commission an opportunity to review the proposed density restrictions.

Paik said the planning commission had only considered a proposed density of one unit per 10 acres. However, Paik noted that his intention is not to preclude supervisors from eventual adoption of the most-restrictive zoning.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman of Carmel Valley told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that the board probably will not take any action in response to the ruling before September when a discussion of a possible court appeal occurs.

"I'm satisfied with the decision made by the board of supervisors in December," said Strasser Kauffman, who was not on the county must start over in its adoption of density requirements for Rancho San Carlos, a board when the zoning designation was adopted.

Strasser Kauffman said she read the planning commission minutes and "it appears evident to me that the planning commission did consider the zoning designation in a range of 1-10 to 1-160 (units per acre)."

The supervisor's own campaign platform favored the more restrictive zoning for Rancho San Carlos.

Strasser Kauffman called Rancho San Carlos a "vulnerable" piece of property.

20,000 acre spread in the hills south of Carmel Valley.

"Whatever occurs there will directly impact Carmel Valley (and) has to be looked at in the context of the entire region."

"This is one of the most critical land use issues, if not the most critical, in the county," she believes.

Strasser Kauffman added that Paik's decision indicates just how important it is to work slowly on land use policies.

"One cannot rush the land use process. It's worth taking an extra few weeks," she said.

Designer seeks harmony in human environments

By SUSAN BOCK

"I HAVE a theory," Neal Kruse began. With paper and pencil in hand he proceeded to draw a huge circle. "This is not only a representation of our environment," he pointed to the circle, "but is also us. In other words we don't stop at our body."

"We are what we see, what we hear, what we smell — all of these comprise the total reality which is us. Thus, instead of being a person in the center of this circle experiencing the space around us, we are really the whole circle."

Kruse's approach to the environment has changed his whole approach to his design business in Carmel. Neal Owen Kruse Associates, of which he is the sole proprietor.

"I used to feel that I was the genius performing a highly creative act for my client and that if the client gave me too much input or had too many considerations he was going to destroy my creative inspiration," Kruse said.

His priorities at that time, he felt, were not only to be photographed and published for his creative endeavors, but to be recognized by his colleagues for creating a work of art with all the right shades of color, all the right balance, and all the right proportion and form. The client was viewed as a necessary evil instead of the person who would actually be living in the space once he was through creating his masterpiece.

"Now I approach my client with the idea that he is the designer and I am only there to pull together his ideas that are already in the process of being. We will find out what his needs are because the whole design lies in his mind and within his experience. All I do is draw that out so he can feel proud of his space. The style will be nobody else's except his."

Some of his most rewarding experiences, Kruse said, occur when a client comes to him and says he has no idea what he wants, has no taste and understands nothing about color. By telling the client he does know what he wants, his whole relationship with the designer changes, Kruse said.

"It is absolute magic," he smiled. "As a matter of fact in most cases I have seen my client begin to feel a little cocky to the point of thinking he doesn't need me anymore. I find this very exciting because that client has acquired a confidence he will have for the rest of his life."

Neal believes people are becoming more aware of how environments affect behavior. The old idea of interior environment being primarily a question of color, balance and proportion has given way to a scientific approach called behavioral design.

"We are beginning to think more in terms of selecting the personality of the individual in his house and not being quite so concerned with whether the colors blend," Kruse said. "It is more important that the color be one the family can identify with and relate to as a part of their personal inner nature. So we are in the process of the shift from design as a form of art to design as a science or a technology."

Kruse said he believes people are so involved in their relationship with environments that they take them for granted.

"It is like a fish being in water," he said.

"A fish thinks everything exists in water so there is no need to question water's influence on him. Our environment is so all-pervasive that we have completely overlooked the effect it has on our emotions."

"For example, in a very small room a person will begin to feel his body and posture pulling in. When he walks into a huge space he can feel his spine straightening up and his breath deepening."

"When he walks into a red room he can feel his pulse begin to pick up. He can be in touch with the fact that his body is constantly

FIRST CHURCH WAS EPISCOPAL

Although Pacific Grove was founded as a methodist retreat, the first church building was for an Episcopalian congregation, St. Mary's-by-the-Sea. It had such a pleasing design that when the time came to enlarge it, rather than add onto it awkwardly the decision was made to cut it in half across the middle move the two halves apart and elongate the building.

Designer seeks harmony in environments

changing and adapting to each new space he encounters," Kruse said.

Once a person is aware of these feelings, he will know that he is responsible for how he feels and can totally change his emotional responses, according to the designer. If he knows he feels sad on a cloudy day, by being aware of this, he can decide for himself that he won't feel blue on cloudy days any longer, Kruse opined. If a person is on the beach and there is litter all around him, he can pick up the litter and heighten his experience of his own environment. The responsibility is his alone, Kruse said.

SINCE 1979, Kruse has taken his theories a step further by holding "Homecoming Seminars" to give people an opportunity to investigate their own personal relationships with the environment in which they live and work. The word "home" means place of origin and in the homecoming seminar Kruse creates an experience in which people can connect completely and directly with their environments.

"Making this connection is what I call a small enlightenment. Having this experience is like coming into the relationship of home with their environments and, therefore, coming home — the homecoming," he said. "It's the realization that wherever you are, that's your space because you are standing in it and experiencing it. This usually leads people into realizing that they are responsible for their own behavior, not someone else."

During the one-day seminar, participants explore the relationship between themselves and their environment from the perspective of how much time they spend indoors — which is a lot more than most people think — to what the environment has to do with the way they live, the way they think of themselves, the way they feel about other people, and the way they relate to the people who live in these spaces with them.

Since everyone is different, each person's uniqueness leads him to see and deal with his environment in a certain way, Kruse explained. An example of this is people who love to have a mess around them all the time and who "come un-glued" if you put them in a clean space. Kruse said this is neither good nor bad. No judgments are made. The questions are simply asked, "Why for you must the room be messy?" Or, for someone else, "Why must it be so clean?" Only the person himself can answer the question that applies.

"Some people feel their space must be completely organized as a way of feeling they have control of their world," Kruse said. "Sometimes people who have a horrible mess are basically pretty scattered. Their lives tend to be in bits and pieces all over the place and they tend to have trouble focusing, but it is also possible for people to have trouble focusing in a very clean space because everything is so together that it stifles any kind of spontaneity. Only the person involved can say what this means to him. You can't generalize."

One gentleman who attended a seminar could never stay in an environment for more than six months, Kruse recalled. The man continued to move around for 15 years, never really knowing why he felt compelled to live that way. When he attended the seminar, he discovered that as he began to set up housekeeping and settle in, he would begin to see himself reflected in the environment around him.

The man did not want to confront himself and would become uneasy and have to move to a different space every time this started to happen, Kruse said. He was, he learned, avoiding awareness of himself as it was being presented to him, or as he was presenting it to himself.

Another young lady who attended a seminar felt that the quality of her environment was lacking. It wasn't what she really wanted. She felt, though, that as soon as she got a job making a little more money, or as soon as the right house came along she would move, Kruse said. In the meantime, she believed she had to stay where she was even though it didn't feel right.

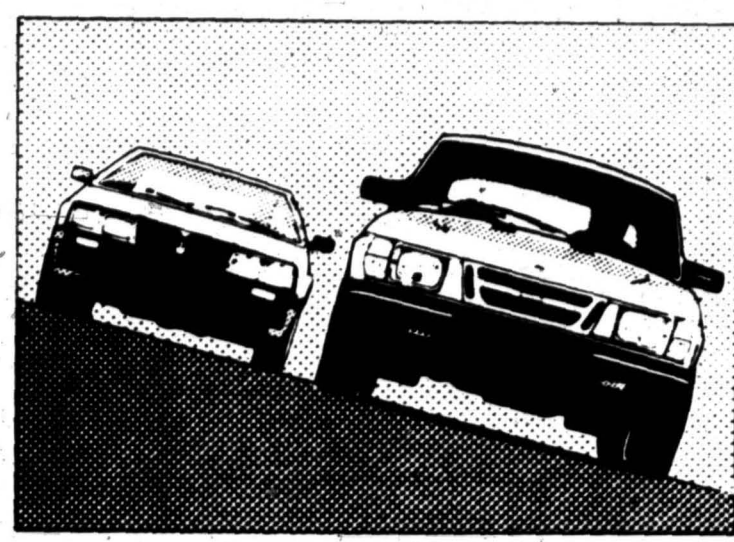

She realized that this was her whole approach to life — that she wasn't quite "successful" yet so things weren't supposed to be okay, Kruse said. Because she wasn't okay and didn't feel she really knew who she was or where she was going, she kept making up excuses why she should settle for what she didn't like in her home and in her job. She was expressing her feelings in her environment and her belief that she was spending before. After making one such change, the rest of her world began to change for the better because she felt better about herself, Kruse said.

The seminars have been very successful and Neal has had much rewarding feedback from other people who have attended. Presently, Neal is also giving talks to the local boards of realtors who have become interested in his concepts. He feels that people are generally more accepting of his ideas today than when he started sharing them six years ago.

Besides his design business, talks to local groups and the "Homecoming Seminars," Neal is also involved in a proposal now before Monterey city officials to create, supervise and present a public forum for residents to establish design standards for the community.

Saab Turbo beats Maserati Biturbo

Winning is always fun. It's most fun when the competition gets toughest.

For the fifth year in a row, readers of West Germany's prestigious Auto Motor und Sport selected the Saab Turbo as the "best imported car under 2.5 liters." It's always been a pretty hotly contested class.

Competition this year came from a car that's making quite a splash among European enthusiasts. It's Maserati's elegant (and expensive) Biturbo coupe. Even in the face of this stiff challenge, the Saab Turbo was the choice of the greatest number of readers.

It is extremely gratifying to be so highly respected by a group of driving enthusiasts who enjoy West Germany's no-speed-limit Autobahns and spectacular alpine roads, and who have to contend with harsh weather and $1.60-a-gallon gasoline.

We'll be happy to arrange a test drive and show you why the Turbo is a superbly balanced machine for either European or American driving conditions.

Mayor Townsend to depart for Japan peace mission

IN AUGUST, 1945 Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend worked in military hospitals while her colonel father served in the South Pacific and her mother assisted with the U.S.O.

Tomorrow, Aug. 2 — nearly 40 years to the day that the United States dropped the first atomic bomb — Mayor Townsend leaves for Japan where she will attend the first-ever "World Conference of Mayors for Peace through Inter-City Solidarity."

The conference will start in Hiroshima, where on Aug. 6, 1945 the first atomic bomb — nicknamed "little boy" — was dropped on the unsuspecting city.

A second bomb — dubbed "fat man" — leveled Nagasaki on April 9, 1945. Shortly thereafter Japan surrendered to end World War II.

The theme of the conference is "Toward the abolition of nuclear weapons (and) roles of cities in the nuclear age."

The conference, which will be conducted in Japanese and English, will start in Hiroshima on Aug. 5 with a keynote address from Alfonso Garcia Robles, former Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs and Nobel Laureate.

During the Hiroshima stay, the mayor also is to participate in conference sessions, a visit to the Peace Memorial Park and meet with survivors of the nuclear bomb blast.

At Nagasaki, the speakers will include mayors and university professors. The film The Atomic Bomb in Nagasaki also will be shown.

The Carmel City Council, which just recently declared the city a nuclear free zone, authorized the mayor's trip.

However, the conference will not cost city taxpayers a dime. Numerous individuals and peace-oriented organizations have donated funds for the mayor's airfare. Once Mayor Townsend arrives in Japan, the city governments of Hiroshima and Nagasaki will pay all transportation, lodging and food costs.

Mayor Townsend's goal at the conference is to forward her concept of a world-wide "umbrella" group that will help organize all of the various peace organizations.

An umbrella agency to coordinate the different peace movements would provide invaluable information, the mayor said.

"There are 200 such groups in California alone," she said.

Mayor Townsend believes small entities such as cities need to band together and create a "snowballing effect," which would make the superpower governments listen to the citizens.

Mayor Townsend is a firm anti-nuclear power advocate.

"It's overkill to an incredible extent," she said of the arms race.

"WE WANT you to tell them — the teenagers of Nagasaki and Hiroshima — that we stand with them," was the message from the Carmel Mission Youth Ministry to Japanese youngsters to be delivered by Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend during her attendance at the first-ever World Conference of Mayors in Japan. Youth Ministry

Boronda voters to decide on erosion program

was little chance for its approval in the following years.

Many speakers speculated on the future of their tax dollars should no project be built. Finnigan said the money is specifically earmarked for construction costs in this project. Matthews said that if the project was not built, the money would be refunded.

Another common sentiment was that of disbelief that so little money could provide protection over the entire two-mile stretch of river. One speaker claimed that her family had spent $50,000 more than the total cost of this project to repair a smaller portion of their own. "I saw that river take boulders and large trees as big as you know what," she said. "I don't think the structures are going to work."

Finnigan, who studied civil and environmental engineering at Clarkson College, differed in opinion. "When you see one of these gabions floating down the river, look up because the next thing you'll see is Noah's ark."

At the meeting there was much concern — if not dissent — with the district plan, and much of the time it seemed that even the district staff could not be totally sure of the success.

The applause was nearly unanimous, however, when Darby Worth said, "This whole thing has been the result of working together on it since a long time ago, and working together will bring it through."

Someone else commented, "It's either sink or swim."

The ballots will be accepted until midnight on Aug. 6 and will be counted at 10 a.m. the next day. They can be mailed or brought by hand to the Monterey County Elections Department, 201 Main St., Salinas between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

All in the Carmel family

I REMEMBER an "All in the Family" show in which Edith Bunker dented a car with a can of cling peaches in heavy syrup.

When she tried to describe to Archie what happened, he grew so tired of the words "cling peaches in heavy syrup" he told her to stifle "cling peaches in heavy syrup." From then on, every time she needed to say "cling peaches in heavy syrup" during her description of the accident, she would say "ummhmmph."

Ice cream has become Carmel's equivalent of "cling peaches in heavy syrup." Just say "ummhmmph" for the words "ice cream" because here comes a totally new Carmel Board of Adjustments and ice cream/take-out food story. This one includes dueling dictionaries.

In the July 24 meeting, the board of adjustments denied a request by the owner of the Ocean Avenue confectionery Chocolate Dreams, Michael Lajigian, to sell an Italian sherbet called gelato.

Though board chairman Gene Cava said that "Carmel has nothing against ice cream and that ice cream and I go way back" the board unanimously accepted the land use committee recommendation for denial.

The recommendation in the committee report stated that it was an expansion of a non-conforming use; that the sale of ice cream for consumption came under the classification of an eating place, not a candy store; it is a take-out food which is against the municipal code; that the sale of ice cream would increase water consumption; and is "detrimental to the health, safety and welfare of the community." (The "killer cones" defense.)

Cava's concern about Carmel's ice cream image was due to the reaction to a previous board application review. The board of adjustments had denied a use permit to Jim Newhouse and Michael Montana for an ice cream parlor, Carmel Creamery, on the grounds of water usage. The application received a great deal of media attention because the board originally was in favor of the Carmel Creamery but was debating on prohibiting the sale of ice cream cones.

Lajigian said he began to sell the "ummhmmph" on May 4 — mainly by the scoop in cups — and was asked to stop by the city on May 19. He complied with the request, though he said he felt that ice cream is a confection and already a part of his business license.

Lajigian referred to the Standard Industrial Classifications, a business classification system for zoning the city uses. The SIC, Lajigian said, lists a soda fountain as "common" in candy, nut and confectionery stores. A call to the Office of Budget and Management in Sacramento confirmed that definition, he added. That meant it was not a "change of use" as the committee report said.

"The SIC definition does say it is common but when we adopted the SIC we knew we would use it with the community needs in mind and interpret it according to those needs. We have done so in the past quite often. As for the water, I say not a drop increase," board member John Logan said.

Lajigian also pointed out that one Webster's dictionary lists ice cream as a confection. Carl Zerbe, Lajigian's attorney, told the board he had brought a copy of a dictionary definition of confection with the words ice cream in it.

Logan treated the board to discussion on his personal dictionary philosophy. Webster's Student is as good as any, he maintained. However, he said, he had a copy of the definition of confectionery from the big Webster's dictionary at Harrison Memorial Library. Neither that definition nor any of the words cross-referenced from that definition referred to ice cream, he said.

The city's own definition of a candy store, Lajigian said, states that the business sells confections for consumption off the premises. That definition eliminates the objection to ice cream as a take-out food from his store.

Lajigian added he would be willing to purchase privately (bottled) any of the additional water that sale of the ice cream would require.

Zerbe argued against the contention that ice cream is a hazard as a litter problem.

"It is not as bad as beer bottles and wine bottles," Zerbe said.

He added that limitation of the sale of ice cream was a violation of constitutional rights such as the right to travel.

The board unanimously voted against the permit for the sale of ice cream at Chocolate Dreams. Lajigian and Zerbe said that they plan to appeal to the council.

I. MAGNIN TURNED DOWN

I. Magnin also received a denial from the board of adjustments for its request to expand in the Carmel Plaza. Magnin representative James Feit said he did not know whether the store would appeal the decision to the city council.

In the Carmel Plaza version of "who's on first," leasing manager Steve Jacobs explained to the board that I. Magnin would expand into part of the adjoining space that Books, Inc. now occupies.

Books, Inc., he said, would expand into adjoining space where Allen and Company is located, but remain about the same size. Allen and Company would move into the Shell Shop's space. The Shell Shop was going to leave the plaza, Jacobs said.

"There will be no expansion of the plaza. It will stay within the same area," Jacobs said.

The stores would close sequentially, Jacobs said, so the bookstore would never be closed more than a month.

Gene Cava, board chairman, asked if Magnin had a lease option to expand. Jacobs said that they did.

John Logan, a board member and member of the land use committee, said he originally had been in favor of the expansion but now he had changed his mind. The store, he said, would be equivalent to 5.9 city lots and that was too big.

"There is nothing in the code that limits the size of stores," Logan said.

"I think there is ample support in the general plan if you feel this is important," said board member Gene Hammond.

Planning director Diane White said that since I. Magnin was on Ocean Avenue, it comes under special "findings" of CHOCOLATE DREAMS on Ocean Avenue in Carmel was stopped from selling gelato and Italian sherbet in May. Owner Michael Lajigian's application July 24 to the Carmel Board of Adjustments for a permit to sell the gourmet ice cream was denied. Lajigian said he started selling the gelato on May 4, three weeks before the controversial Carmel Creamery application for an old-fashioned ice cream parlor with ice cream cones. compatibility for that area. The use must be compatible with the surrounding area, contribute to maintenance of and not be out of character with a village atmosphere.

The board was unanimous in its denial of the use permit. Jacobs said in a later Pine Cone/Outlook interview that the decision was a surprise and a disappointment.

"The idea to preserve by stagnation is really a questionable approach," Jacobs said. "There is a constant complaint that Carmel is not getting the same socioeconomic level of tourist that used to come here. That change will be intensified if they don't allow the kind of upgrading we want to do. The people the town wants to attract demand the more expensive store and motel. Being against these changes does not really preserve the character of the town. It just leads to a deterioration."

SOME PERMITS WIN

Other board actions included:

- Denial of a request by Howard "Bud" Allen, who was absent from the meeting, for outdoor seating at It's Bud's Pub in the Su Vecino Court on Lincoln Street. The board also denied a request by Allen to change the 49 percent alcohol sales/50 percent food sales requirement on his use permit.

- Granted a use permit to change Ellie's Hayloft on Dolores Street to a Hand Works shop like the one on Dolores Street next to the Tuck Box. The change should take place in January, said Hand Works owner Peggy Coonley. The first Hand Works shop will stay open.

- Granted a move for New Zealand Sheepskin within the Carmel Plaza.

- Granted a permit for a sandwich bar in Carmel Country Corner on the corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue. The restaurant has been closed since May and will reopen after the work is done. Contractor David Stocker told the board the intent was to make the restaurant less formal and offer a simpler style of food.

VALLEY LODGE REOPENS

Robles Del Rio Lodge, at 200 Punta Del Monte in Carmel Valley, reopened in June under the guiding hand of Ron and Yolanda Gurries and all the not-so-little Gurries. Ron Gurries is part-owner on the Carmel Highlands motel Tickle Pink.

"It is the oldest lodge in the Valley," said son and general manager Glen Gurries. "I heard one report that it was built in 1914."

Robles del Rio Lodge closed about two years ago, he said, and ownership reverted back to Woods from the San Francisco lawyer who purchased it.

The restaurant and bar, called Voirriche, should open Aug. 15, Glen said. It will feature a California-French country cuisine.

"Mr. Wood took very good care of it," Yolanda noted. "We really did not have to do any major renovation. We have done some painting and put in a handicap entrance, but we mainly have done a lot of landscaping."

Glen said they are leasing it right now but do plan to buy it in the future.

"We have the biggest pool in the Valley," he said. The pool and hot tub are open to the public at $3 a person.

The lodge has some cabins with fireplaces and kitchen units and they are equipped to handle business groups, Yolanda added.

"It is a very quiet country atmosphere with a wonderful view of the Valley [the lodge is located on the top of the mountain over Carmel Valley Village]" she said. "There are a lot of mature oaks on the property and it is delightful to sit in the hot tub with the mountains all around."

The lodge is a Gurries "family venture," Yolanda said. All five of the children — sons Glen, Kent and Keith and daughters Kim and Sabrina — all have some part in the operation.

"Ron owns Tickle Pink with his family but this one is just for our family," she added.

County official delays Spanish Bay project

PEBBLE BEACH Co. has been dealt another setback in its plan to build Spanish Bay resort, a 270-room hotel, 80-condominium and golf course complex in Del Monte Forest.

Monterey County Environmental Health Officer Walter Wong has ruled that the company cannot begin construction of the hotel until the Carmel Sanitary District completes the expansion of its sewage disposal plant.

The Carmel Sanitary District has the permits to increase its treatment capacity by about 600,000 gallons per day and construction is underway with a Dec. 1 completion date scheduled.

Once completed, the expansion will provide the sewage capacity for Spanish Bay, which is expected to generate about 50,000 gallons per day.

The Pebble Beach Community Services District, which provides sewage treatment services to Pebble Beach, does not have a treatment plant but purchases one-third the capacity of the Carmel facility.

And company plans to construct a separate treatment facility to serve Spanish Bay have not been decided upon by the Coastal Commission.

In his announcement Wong expressed concern that the county could be liable if Spanish Bay resort is constructed and then the sewage expansion remains uncompleted.

Carmel Sanitary District General Manager Michael Zambory told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that does not think that there will be any problems meeting the Dec. 1 date.

"We have no reason to believe we will not have all our processes on line by Dec. 1, 1985," Zambory said. "There's no question of it."

He said "virtually nothing" — barring labor or materials delivery problems or a major catastrophe — would delay the project that has been underway for the past 20 months.

"You have to make your own odds. One million, 10 million-to-one," he speculated.

Zambory said Wong's decision comports with the county health official's "very conservative" decisions when it comes to public health matters.

"He's very conservative. He's simply that way," Zambory said.

Pebble Beach Co. spokeswoman Judith Brown said Wednesday morning that no decision had been made whether to appeal Wong's decision to the board of supervisors.

"We have not made any decision whatsoever," Brown said.

The company originally had scheduled a December, 1984 ground breaking for the resort. Some work has begun on the golf course but Wong's decision appears to mean that the company time schedule has been delayed for about a year.

THE COASTAL Commission meets Wednesday, Aug. 14 in Eureka to consider Pebble Beach Co. plans for a 600,000-gallon-per-day wastewater reclamation facility, but no final decision is anticipated.

Commissioners meet at the Eureka Inn, Seventh and Frank streets, Eureka.

There have been requests filed with the commission by opponents of the project as well as by Monterey County officials seeking an extension of the hearing date.

Supervisors to meet in evening session

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors will meet in a rare evening session next week to continue its review of how to provide more affordable homes.

Supervisors have scheduled a 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 6 hearing on proposed changes to the county inclusionary housing ordinance, a four-year-old law that requires developers to set aside 15 percent of their project for low- and moderate-income housing.

However, because the existing ordinance does not specify that the less expensive housing had to be built on-site, no low- and moderate-cost units have been built in unincorporated Monterey County since the measure was adopted in 1981.

In addition developers had another loophole. The existing ordinance allows developers to pay in "in lieu" fee rather than build affordable homes. Most builders prefer to pay the fee rather than offer moderate-priced units next door to exclusive homes.

There is one nine-unit affordable housing project now under development as part of the Mesa Hills West subdivision off Los Laureles

Grade.

Supervisors received an introduction to the modifications to the ordinance and then continued the hearing until the evening of Aug. 6. The meeting will be in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Some of the proposed changes are:

- That the county take over the responsibility of program administration rather than the separate Monterey County Housing Authority. An advisory committee would be established to monitor the program.

- Developers of five or more units will be required to build the low- and moderate-cost housing "on site."

- Developers of smaller projects can pay an in lieu fee based on the value of the property.

LIBRARY TO CLOSE

Harrison Memorial Library will be closed to the public Aug. 5-8 because of remodeling. Other Monterey Peninsula libraries will be open during that period.

Thursday, Aug. 8, the children's Whale Bus program will take place as planned. Children will meet on the patio in front of the library. The children's summer reading club will be extended to Aug. 16.

Board to review Big Sur land plan

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors will continue its review of the draft Big Sur land use plan at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 6 at the county courthouse in Salinas.

Anticipated at that session will be a report from Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman of Carmel Valley and board Chairman Dusan Petrovic, who met with Big Sur residents in an informal land use plan session July 26.

Strasser Kauffman had nothing but praise for the meeting, which she said provided her with "valuable input" on some of the concerns of Big Sur residents.

The most frequently mentioned topic was the need for more definition of uses allowed in the rural/community center and what the boundaries of the areas would be, she said.

The draft plan proposes to concentrate commercial growth in the rural community centers, which is similar to the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan that will restrict commercial growth to the mouth of the Valley, mid-Valley and the village.

Residents who spoke also raised concerns about development at El Sur Ranch, an approximately 7,100 acre spread that stretches on both sides of Highway 1 between Bixby Bridge and Molera State Park.

The Coastal Commission has rejected a proposal to build up to 98 homes, a 100-room hotel and 200-seat restaurant on El Sur Ranch.

Strasser Kauffman said El Sur Ranch attorneys indicated at the meeting that the hotel concept is "not set in stone."

"That means a lot to me. I think that we had a lot of cooperation. Although many of the people there disagreed, they were respectful and there was a general feeling of cooperation," she said.

Strasser Kauffman said the Aug. 6 hearing will be a continuation of the public hearings. Comments will be received on the entire report.

Staff then is to prepare a summary of comments and proposed changes for supervisors when they begin to tackle the land use plan in detail in late August and early September.

Strasser Kauffman anticipates that the county will adopt the draft LUP in late September. The plan still must be certified by the Coastal Commission.

New symphony members gather in celebration

"WE ALL BEAT as one heart." These were the words Edward Randall Bennett, president of the Monterey Bay Symphony Association, used to describe the cooperation, the dedication, the united positive energy, and the "the joyous work," that went into creation of this newly-formed group.

Sunday evening, July 21, Norma Jean Hodges, second vice president, devoted her Carmel home to the association for a dinner party celebration. Hodges, introduced by Bennett as the "prime mover, the founder extraordinaire," explained: "It is a party to celebrate our new beginning, a party given by the board of trustees for the conductor and music director Oleg Kovalenko and the orchestra."

"It is a mutually congratulating...signing ceremony celebration," said William Stewart, general manager, "signing 55 out of 65 'old' orchestra members" who formerly were associated with the Monterey County Symphony.

Ron Weitzman, first vice president, mentioned the "quality and expertise" of the Monterey Bay Symphony Advisory Committee, a committee that will meet with Carmelite Kovalenko during the year for the program development and soloist selection. The advisory committee includes Julius Baker, flutist; Igor Kipnis, harpsichordist; Camilla Wicks, violinist, Carnegie Hall performer and teacher; and William Rusinak, violinist and former conductor of the White House Ensemble.

Kovalenko spoke in gratitude Sunday evening. "Never a person has been honored more," he said. "You put your trust in me. I will study my scores diligently. I love you, I drink to you, I thank everyone!"

Kovalenko and Bennett spoke of the future plans for the Monterey Bay Symphony, a first of the season concert Oct. 13 and the possibility of an "on the green" pops concert at Laguna Seca Sept. 8.

Among the many supporters who celebrated were: David Walton, treasurer, past president of the Monterey County Symphony Association 1959-60; George Reith, Jr., assistant secretary; Elizabeth Sasic, assistant secretary; Frank Wright, assistant treasurer; Maurice and Francis Sachs of Carmel Highlands; Kemay and Carson Eoyang of Monterey; Susan and Stephanie Kovalenko of Carmel; and Charles and Evelyn

About Bulls & Bears & Savings Bonds.

The stock market says that bulls are good and bears are bad. But if you buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan, you can get the most out of both markets.

Rates are high during bull markets, so the variable interest rate you get on Bonds lets you share in those higher returns.

But if the bear takes over and rates fall, don't panic: you're protected by a guaranteed minimum of 7.5%.

Just hold your Bonds 5 years or more, and you can ride the bull and beat the bear.

BERGER EARNS SIR THOMAS MORE MEDAL

Sanford L. Berger of Carmel has received the Sir Thomas More Medal for Book Collecting by the University of San Francisco. Berger and his wife Helen began collecting the works of William Morris, 19th century English artist and poet, more than 20 years ago.

"The archive contains a great number of drawings, photographs and trial samples of woven and printed fabrics, wallpapers, tapestries, carpets, embroideries, stained glass windows as well as handwritten record books, a dye book and part of a reference library. In making your library available to qualified scholars, you recognize its great value for future researchers," said University of San Francisco Library Director Fr. William J. Monihan at the award presentation.

Berger, a graduate of the University of California and Harvard University, retired a couple of years ago as senior vice president of the San Francisco architectural firm Stone, Marraccini, and Patterson. Berger was with the company for 27 years.

TWENTY PERCENT TOPINION

BY DAVID MARADEI
CARMEL CITY COUNCILMAN

A place to go

I WAS GRABBING a bite for lunch at a local restaurant last week when a friend stopped in to say hello.

During our conversation he asked the owner of the restaurant if he could use the restroom. The owner was polite but firm. He told him that restrooms were for paying customers only, not for the use of the general public. It was policy. I have often seen him turn down people who just want to use the facilities.

Unfortunately, that policy is quite common throughout our business district. Local business could go a long way to resolve the problem this city has with providing public facilities by just opening their doors a little.

But that won't happen. They have a good reason for disallowing random public utilization of toilets. It costs them money. The maintenance of restrooms is a costly practice as well as an unpleasant chore. So business has shifted that responsibility to the city and, therefore, the taxpayers of the city.

It was not an item mentioned in the log of questions on our city questionnaire but it was one that received substantial comment anyway. People made a point of asking the city council to do something about the problem by writing it in under general comments.

ALREADY the council has begun by approving concept plans for a small restroom in the corner of the parking lot at the post office. I did not vote on this issue because of the appearance of a conflict of interest because of my work as station manager of the post office.

Several comments have been made about the wisdom of placing public facilities on that site. It would appear that facilities at the post office parking lot would just add congestion to a place that is already overcrowded with traffic.

That is a concern I share with them. The logic of the council is that this is just one of three sites within the city, and that this specific site would provide facilities for residents who visit the post office. The installation of other facilities closer to the center of the village would reduce utilization of the post office toilets. We will have to wait and see if it works out that way.

I think that a close examination of some facts about public restrooms within the city might reduce some of the dissatisfaction our residents feel about how the city has dealt with the problem. Before I impart this information I would like to frame it in the following context.

We are a one-square-mile community with 4,700 residents. We now have seven (yes, seven) public restrooms. They are located at upper Forest Hill Park near the tennis courts. There is also a set at the lower Forest Hill Park near the recreation area. We have them at the Forest Theater, at Sunset Center, at City Hall, and at the beachfront on Ocean Avenue. The final set, the one that disturbs the harmony of the community, is in the parking lot at the library. I agree, they are awful.

THE COUNCIL has made a commitment to place public restrooms on the Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street site no matter what kind of structure is eventually constructed there. Our final proposed city restroom site is at Devendorf Park. The council has not decided if they should be placed there yet.

My reason for telling you this is twofold. First, the council is working on the problem for you. We have designated sites and we will attempt to develop sensitive plans which will marry with the character of the city. Second, and this goes back to my opening comment, we have the same problem as local business. It is going to cost us dollars to maintain the restrooms to the standard you expect. Our budget expenses in labor will increase to provide this service for both residents and visitors.

We all know that the only thing worse than not having a restroom when you need one is having a filthy one. That is something we will not allow to happen.

If there is a good solution to this expensive and uncomfortable situation perhaps it will come in a sharing of the burden of providing public facilities. Maybe once the restrooms are completed and functioning, local business will be able to unlock their closed restroom doors and treat resident and visitor alike, as guests and good neighbors. That would be nice.

There is still room for public comment and ideas on reaching a satisfactory solution to restrooms. The council is always willing to listen to your input. If you have any innovative suggestions which might help us, please address them to the city council, P.O. Box CC, Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif. 93921.

Working together, we may uncover a better, more cost-effective answer to the questions you have raised regarding restrooms.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

When Pat Moore, an industrial designer and gerontology student, stepped out of her New York apartment one morning in 1979, she looked 60 years older than she had the day before! In order to understand the problems of the elderly, 26-year-old Pat had taken on the appearance and mannerisms of a woman of 85. She did this at least one day a week for the next three years, visiting a total of 14 cities all over the United States and meeting hundreds of people. During that time the young "oldest" encountered many instances of age discrimination. She was a victim of muggers and was ignored or treated with impatience by many clerks and service people. But she also found beauty and serenity as a "senior" and established numerous friendships with others both young and old. Her conclusion: despite its obvious problems, growing older can be a joyful part of life, as long as a person remains open to new experiences.

OBITUARIES

Robert Shaw, Sr.

Memorial services took place at El Estero Chapel of the Mission Mortuary for Robert B. Shaw, a retired deputy coroner in Monterey County and a longtime resident of Pebble Beach, who was found dead July 25 near Spyglass Golf Course in Pebble Beach. He was 67.

Born Sept. 12, 1917, he served as a deputy coroner from 1967 through 1981, after he retired from the Army criminal investigation division at Fort Ord.

A World War II veteran, he was a member of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Monterey Peninsula Scottish Society and the Monterey County Police Officers Association.

He is survived by his son Robert B. Shaw, Jr.; daughter Donna Dye of San Jose; four grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. His wife Sachie died in a traffic accident in 1971.

Cremation is scheduled to take place at the Monterey City Cemetery. The Mission Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Memorial contributions are suggested to the American Heart Association.

Allen Schleicher

A memorial Mass was celebrated July 26 at the Blessed Sacrament Chapel of Carmel Mission for Allen Kleiber Schleicher, a longtime resident of Monterey and Carmel who died July 22 at Community Hospital. He was 63.

Born March 11, 1922 in St. Louis, Mo., he was a graduate of Washington University in St. Louis and also earned a master's degree from the same university.

He came to the Monterey Peninsula in 1952, at the same time as the Naval Postgraduate School moved here from Annapolis, Md., and was employed by the school in the mechanical engineering department from 1949 to 1955.

He moved to Berkeley in 1955, where he was associated with the Andre Paper Box Company. In 1958 he founded the Tensor Corp., an engineering consulting firm. He returned to the Monterey Peninsula in 1966 and worked as an engineering consultant.

Survivors include his son Conan of Davis; daughter Nina of Manhattan Beach, and his mother Jane Schleicher of Monterey.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Intensive Care Unit of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, Box HH, Monterey, 93940.

Sarah Macpherson

Memorial services took place July 29 at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Sarah Macpherson of Carmel who died July 25 at Community Hospital. She was 71.

Born May 9, 1914 in Kokomo, Ind., she was a resident of Carmel since 1957.

She was a past president of the Republican Women's Club and was active in civic affairs.

Survivors include her daughter Jean Fullerton of Oyster Bay, N.Y.; and two grandsons. Her husband Kenneth died in 1971.

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel, followed by inurnment at the El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Memorial contributions are suggested to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, P.O. Box HH, Monterey, Calif. 93940.

Falkland Lansdowne

Private services were conducted at the Lansdowne residence, and cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Falkland Mackinnon Lansdowne of Carmel Valley who died July 24 at Community Hospital. He was 70.

Born Jun 20, 1915 in Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., he was a graduate of the Naval Academy in 1937 and received a master of science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1941. He also attended the Naval War College from 1955 to 1957.

He and his wife Mary purchased property in Carmel Valley in 1943 and built their home there in 1968. He retired from the Navy in 1964 after 27 years of service.

He was a member of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers. His father Zachary Lansdowne was a well-known authority on lighter-than-air aircraft and was commander of the airship Shenandoah.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by his son Zachary of Santa Monica, and his sister Peggy of Washington, D.C.

Ashes were scheduled to be scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Salvation Army.

Mary B. Wolfe

Cremation took place under the direction of the Paul Mortuary, followed by burial of ashes at the family plot at Bethel Cemetery in Mendon, Ohio, for Mary B. Wolfe of Hacienda Carmel who died July 27 at the home of her daughter and son-in-law in Carmel Valley. She was 95.

Mrs. Wolfe, known as Dolly, was born Jan. 15, 1890 in Mercer County, Ohio. She was the daughter of a pioneer Ohio family and was active in school, club, lodge, community and church affairs in Ohio and Michigan.

A resident of the Monterey Peninsula for 20 years, she was a member of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel and the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She was a regent of the DAR in Celina and was a past matron of the Order of the Eastern Star there. She was honored as the chapter's sweetheart in 1983.

Survivors include her daughter Evelyn Holmes of Carmel Valley; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Her husband of 60 years, Harry, died in 1968.

Memorial services are scheduled Aug. 11 at the Dick Mortuary in Celina, Ohio.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, P.O. Box 223139, Carmel, Calif. 93922; or to the Visiting Nurse Association, 187 Eldorado St., Monterey, Calif. 93940.

Gerald G. Duncan

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Gerald G. ("Gerry") Duncan of Carmel who died July 27 at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 87.

Born Aug. 13, 1897 in St. Joseph, Mo., he was real estate salesman on the peninsula for 30 years and until last month was an agent with Valley View Realty.

He came to the Monterey Peninsula in 1950 and lived in Pebble Beach for 20 years, then moved to Carmel. He was a former member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club and an avid golfer.

Survivors include his wife Elva; his daughter Patti A. Cunningham of Carmel Valley; and two grandsons.

Private services took place under the direction of the Paul Mortuary.

STATE FLOWER IS 'SLEEPY'

The Spanish name for the California poppy, the state flower, is dormidera, "the drowsy one," because the petals fold in "sleep" at evening.

Scottish festival celebrates Caledonian food, sport and music

TARTANED viewers and participants are a fixture during both the Parade of the Caber through Carmel and the Scottish Festival and Highland Games. The 17th annual games will be staged Saturday, Aug. 3 at the Monterey Fairgrounds and Exposition Park.

FLEET-FOOTED dancers in their tartans and velvet jackets, brawny athletes tossing the caber and throwing the hammer, and the distinctive sound of the bagpipe — such are the sights and sounds of the annual Scottish Festival and Highland Games.

The day-long festival returns for the 17th year, to be presented 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 3 at the Monterey Fairgrounds and Exposition Park, Fairgrounds and Garden roads in Monterey.

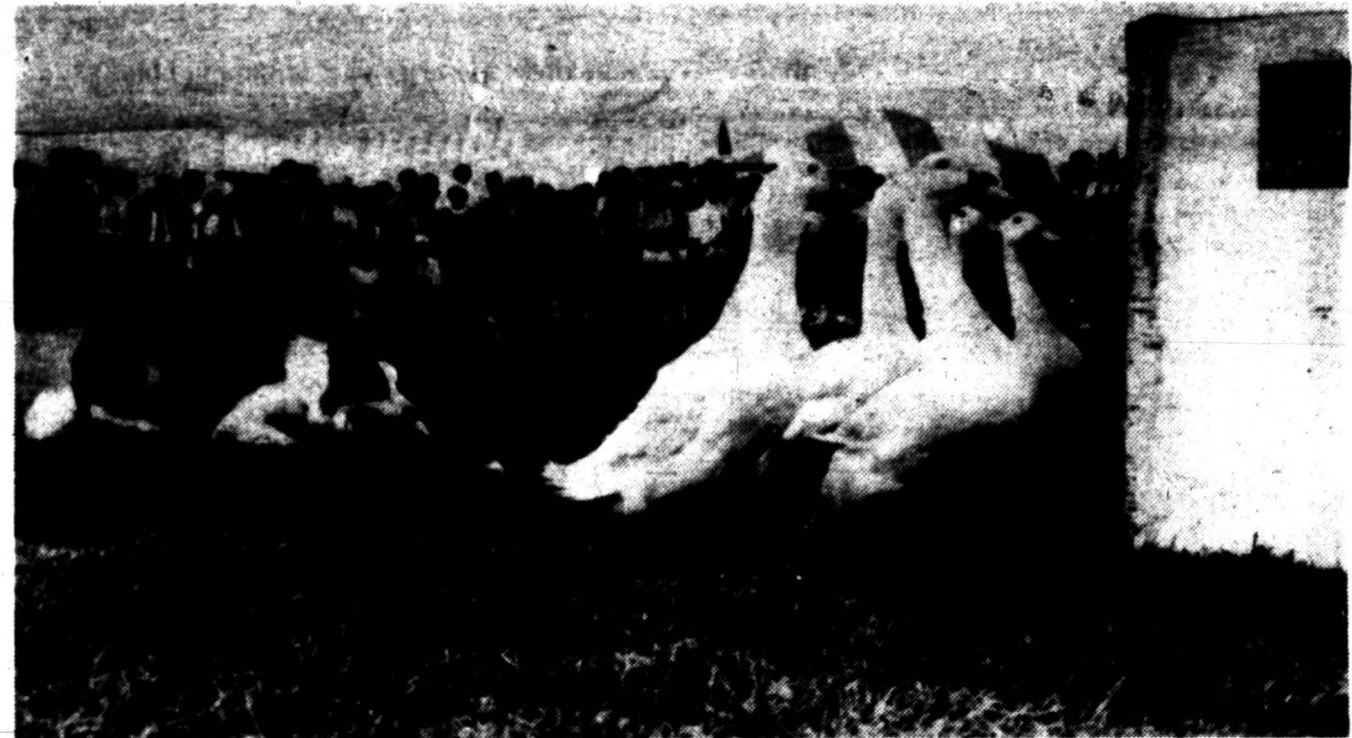

Organized by the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula, the celebration opens Friday, Aug. 2 with the traditional Parade of the Caber in Carmel.

This annual procession begins at 6 p.m. at Devendorf Park. Singer Alex Beaton will perform, then a marching band and members of the Scottish Society will carry the Ballantine Caber from Ocean Avenue to Lincoln Street, back up Ocean Avenue to San Carlos Street and south to the Red Lion Tavern.

The Highland Games presented Saturday, Aug. 3, is a community event to benefit several charitable organizations. These include the Elks' national cerebral palsy fund, the adaptive physical education project at Monterey Peninsula College and several peninsula and Salinas youth groups.

Piping and drumming competitions continue throughout the morning, and this year a contest for mini-bagpipe bands is included. The flamboyant drum majors will again strut in competition.

Athletic contests are another festival fixture. Tartaned athletes will display strength and skill in such events as tossing the caber, throwing the hammer and putting the stone. Tug-of-war contests are planned, as is a running of the Scottish 100-yard dash.

BORDER COLLIES exhibit skill when herding sheep and geese during the Scottish Festival and Highland Games. Humans compete as well during such events as tossing the caber, putting the stone and throwing the hammer.

CARMEL WILL resound to the sights and sounds of Scotland on Friday, Aug. 2 during the traditional Parade of the Caber. The procession opens at 6 p.m. with a ceremony in Devendorf Park. The caber, accompanied by the music of a bagpipe band, is carried through downtown in a parade that concludes at the Red Lion Tavern on San Carlos Street.

Pattee Arena will be the site of an afternoon show which will feature massed bagpipe bands in full attire, a brass band, the Continental Color Guard from Fort Ord and the Highland dancing competitions. Separate admission is required for the arena shows, and seating is limited.

A new attraction will be the second annual United States Western Regional Gaelic Harp Championships. Traditional Scottish events return along the oak-studded fairgrounds mall. Border collies will demonstrate their skill at herding sheep and geese. Caledonian culture will be evidenced during demonstrations of spinning and weaving.

British and American food will be available for sale along the mall and in the Oakwoods restaurant all day. Retail booths will also offer imported goods from the British Isles.

Beginning at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, the Ceilidh (pronounced kay-lee) party will commence in the Monterey Room of the fairgrounds. The party features dancing to live music, Scottish entertainment and Scottish country dancing.

Ceilidh-goers may purchase tickets at the Headquarters Tent on Saturday. Admission is $6 for adults; $3 for children 12 and under.

Admission to the Scottish Festival and Highland Games is $7 general, $5 for military and students with ID. Children six and under are admitted free. Arena show admission is $1 extra per ticket.

Tickets can be purchased at the gate or in advance at the Scottish Shop and Scotch House, Carmel; Abinante's and The Elks Lodge, Monterey; Bookworks, Pacific Grove and Stewart's Gifts, Salinas.

Horses of summer convene in P.B.

TOP WEST Coast riders will compete in more than 80 classes during the 39th annual Summer Horse Show. The competition is scheduled Thursday through Sunday, Aug. 1-4 at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

Admission is free for spectators who wish to observe riders in such categories as junior hunter, medal, pairs over fences, adult amateur jumpers, side saddle exhibition and open jumper classes at this American Horse Show Association-approved show.

At noon Sunday, Aug. 4, a "Touch of Classics" luncheon will be served. Luncheon price is $35, with proceeds to benefit the United States Equestrian Team (USET). For reservations, call 624-2756.

A covered ringside enclosure will be provided by the Equestrian Center for sponsors and patrons throughout the four-day show. Bar and food booths will also operate as a USET benefit.

Show admission and general parking are free. The usual $4 gate fee for entrance to Pebble Beach remains in effect. The Pebble Beach Equestrian Center is on Portola Road off Stevenson Drive in Pebble Beach.

Following are times for the respective classes during the four-day event.

Festival honors Steinbeck

THE WORKS OF Nobel Prize-winning author and Salinas native John Steinbeck will be commemorated in multiple ways during the sixth annual Steinbeck Festival, which opens Friday, Aug. 2.

Guest lecturers, films, panel discussions and bus and walking tours will celebrate the achievements of the Salinas-born author whose writings include The Grapes of Wrath, Travels with Charley, To a God Unknown, Of Mice and Men and East of Eden.

Admission is by voluntary donation to the opening celebration, planned 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 2 in the Galleria at Salinas Community Center, 940 N. Main St., Salinas. Wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

Professor Robert DeMott, director of the Steinbeck Research Center at San Jose State University and, author of Steinbeck's Readings, will deliver the keynote address at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 3.

The festival is sponsored by the John Steinbeck Library in Salinas. Admission is free to all events with the exception of the bus tours, priced at $15 each, and film screenings, which are $1. Pre-registration is advised for the bus tours, which include lunch. For further information, call 758-7311.

"The festival provides attendees an excellent opportunity to experience simultaneously John Steinbeck's writings and the beautiful Steinbeck Country — the Salinas Valley and the Monterey Peninsula — he so vividly describes in his works," noted John Gross, festival founder and organizer.

Following is the roster of additional activities of the sixth annual Steinbeck Festival. Except as noted, all events will take place in the Salinas Community Center, 941 N. Main St.

Don't kid around with life.

Kids do the cutest things with kittens and puppies. They also do some very ugly things. Particularly when the child is too young to understand how much innocent play may frighten or injure an animal.

That's why parents should wait until their child is old enough before bringing pets into the home.

When the time comes, the Monterey County SPCA is an intelligent place to choose the right type, age and size of pet for your family. The Monterey County SPCA has dogs, cats and other pets of virtually every breed, all screened for health and temperament.

We only charge you a small fee. But we ask you to invest some serious thought.

BACH FESTIVAL REVIEW

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

WEEK TWO of the Carmel Bach Festival got off to a beautiful beginning on Monday, July 22 with the morning recital at the Golden Bough Theater.

Judith Davidoff emerged from the massed strings to appear, in partnership with harpsichordist Bruce Lamott, in sonatas by Handel and Bach. It is a rare treat to hear the viola da gamba as a solo instrument.

The viol family is quite distinct from the violin family. Both are stringed instruments played with bows, but the similarity shops there. Viols, like (most) guitars and lutes, have six strings and are fretted. The tension of the strings is much lower than on violins, and the bow and its technique are different. The result is a small, sweet sound, capable of the utmost subtlety while losing nothing in lively music.

Davidoff's instrument is a bass gamba. It comes both larger and smaller, but the other instruments appear most often in consorts of viols.

Davidoff and Lamott did very well by Handel and Bach. Here was some true baroque phrasing and styling, with the instruments and the players in good balance.

Arthur Krehbiel, French horn, gave an instructive and entertaining demonstration of the evolution of the horn, from the ram's horn, through the conch shell, a length of hose (not, I believe, authentic in terms of the instrument's development) and on to the many feet of tubing that make up the modern French horn. He demonstrated with a number of horn calls, and the beautiful horn solo that opens Britten's Serenade for Tenor, Horn and Strings, written for the late Dennis Brain.

Krehbiel then joined Mark Volkert, violin; Jan Volkert, cello; and Madeleine Ingram, harpsichord, in a thoroughly delightful Haydn Divertimento. This is evidently the original instrumentation, although it would have been a valveless horn in Haydn's day. Although these pieces are from Haydn's youth, and generally written in a hurry for some function, many of them are quite good and worthy of more exposure.

Monday afternoon, Bruce Lamott was in the limelight, speaking on 300 years of Bach. The lecture was illustrated visually and aurally, and I recommend that all-enthusiasts attend it. Among other things, it raises provocative questions about each generation's re-molding of Bach in its own image. Horrendous as this has occasionally been, it surely is a tribute accorded few composers.

MANY CONCERTS during this week, of course, are repeats of the first week.

Tuesday afternoon's Concert for Young Listeners was enjoyed by a good many older listeners as well. Igor Kipnis and the Festival Brass Ensemble shared the program. As important as the fact that they all played well, I think, was the sheer pleasure that all the participants took in the instruments and the music. It is wonderful for the youngsters to see that, although we work very hard and have lots of frustrations, it is still a lot of fun to be a musician.

Ken Ahrens appeared with Wolfgang Basch, trumpet, in a recital of music for organ and trumpet at Bethlehem Lutheran in Monterey on Friday afternoon. Ahrens also continued his exploration of the solo organ works of Bach, once again featuring a set of chorale variations, O Gott, du frommer Gott, that was outstanding.

The trumpet compositions were a Suite by Handel, Trumpet Voluntary by William Boyce, and three character pieces of Telemann. The combination of organ and trumpet is well-calculated to bring an audience right up out of their seats, and it did.

Morning recitals have moved to All Saints' Church, Carmel, and it is a welcome move. The live sound in the church is much preferred for this music to the dead theater sound. Peter Rejto continues his winning ways with the Sebastian Bach Cello Suites.

If fatigue is beginning to show on the performers, it is not on the audiences, whose enthusiasm continues as though they were being exposed to this wonderful music for the first time.

New Forum to present seminar

The New Forum of Carmel, a group established to seek alternatives to nuclear war, will conduct an all-day seminar on Saturday, Aug. 10.

"Project Victory" is designed to establish a new view on how Americans can take the lead in building a secure world in the nuclear age. It will be led by Gary Lapid, M.D. and Craig Schindler, J.D., Ph.D.

The seminar will take place 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 501 Eldorado, Monterey. Registration is by mail and forms are available by writing The New Forum, Box 5595, Carmel, 93922. For details, call 624-1803.

ON STAGE

Ondine

A nymph who springs from the sea and falls in love with a knight is the romantic core of Ondine. Jean Giraudoux's interpretation of this legendary romance is directed by Marcia Gambrell Hovick for the outdoor Forest Theater.

Ondine opens at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 1 at the theater, located at Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel. The play continues at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Admission is $6 for adults, $4 for full-time students and senior citizens over age 62. No reservations are taken and the box office opens at 7:30 p.m. Viewers are advised to dress warmly. Information: 624-1531.

Stage Struck

Stage Struck, a comedy punctuated by gunfire and the fall of bodies from the ceiling, is scheduled to open Saturday, Aug. 3 at California Repertory Theatre.

The plot focuses on Robert, an actor-turned-stage manager who learns that his actress wife, Anne, plans to divorce him and turn him out of the house. Robert concocts a vengeful plot to try to teach her a lesson.

Previews are at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Aug. 1-2. Preview admission is $7.50. Admission price for the champagne opening on Saturday is $17.50. Stage Struck

Dixieland, Inc. performs in Carmel

Dixieland, Inc. will make its sixth appearance at the outdoor Forest Theater Sunday Afternoon Series on Aug. 4.

The series is free and begins 2 p.m. at the historic theater on Mountain View Avenue at Santa Rita Street in Carmel.

Dixieland, Inc. last year performed before a crowd of 250,000 during the Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee. This marked the group's fifth appearance in the jubilee.

Appearing with the Dixieland, Inc. band are Bill Burgess, trumpet; Don Pellerin, clarinet; Ken Blood, trombone; Keith Rubrecht, tuba; Edna Lewis, tenor saxophone and Eric Nicoll on drums.

Illusory rapture

THE KING, portrayed by Jeff Hudelson, expresses amazement and delight at an illusion created by Illusionist James Goffard in Ondine. Jean Giraudoux's romantic fable opens this week at the outdoor Forest Theater in Carmel. (Photograph by Alan McEwen.)

continues at 7 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 4; and 8 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 6-7. Tuesday, Wednesday and Sunday admission is $9.50.

C&I Rep is at 125 Ocean View Blvd. in the American Tin Cannery, Pacific Grove. Tickets: 372-4373.

The Sorcerer

Gilbert and Sullivan's 1877 comic operetta The Sorcerer will be staged by Monterey Peninsula College beginning 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 2 at the York School Theater, 9501 Monterey-Salinas Highway.

This light-hearted satire on Victorian mores and morals is directed by Nick Zanides with musical direction by Stephen Tosh. The Sorcerer continues at 8 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $6 at the door. Reservations: 372-2475.

The Winter's Tale

Passion and jealousy are transformed in this Shakespearean classic presented by The Western Stage at Hartnell College, Salinas.

Directed by Dennis Bigelow, The Winter's Tale plays at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 1; Friday, Aug. 2 and Wednesday, Aug. 7 on the Repertory Stage.

Admission is $7.50 Sundays through Thursdays and $8.50 Fridays and Saturdays, with discounts available for children under 12 and senior citizens. The theater is at 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Tickets: 375-2111.

Bus Stop

Bus Stop, William Inge's study of a collection of weary travelers holed up in a roadside diner for the night continues at The Studio Theatre Restaurant.

The play focuses on Cherie, a Kansas City nightclub singer, and Bo, a rancher who seeks to sweep her off her feet.

Dinner is served at 7 p.m., with curtain at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays through Sundays until Sept. 14. Times are one hour earlier on Sundays. Dinner and show price is $24.50. The theater restaurant is on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel. Tickets: 624-1661.

The Gin Game

A game of gin rummy between two senior citizens becomes an eloquent metaphor for the game of life in the Western Stage production of The Gin Game.

This bittersweet comedy, written by D.L. Coburn and directed by Michael Winters, continues on the Repertory Stage of the Salinas theater, 156 Homestead Ave. The Gin Game plays at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 6.

Sunday through Thursday tickets are priced at $7.50. Friday and Saturday shows cost $8.50. Discounts are available for children under 12 and senior citizens. Tickets: 375-2111.

Monterey Bay TheatreFest

Admission is free to the second annual Monterey Bay TheatreFest, staged Saturdays and Sundays through Aug. 11 in the historic Custom House Plaza near Fisherman's Wharf and the Doubletree Mall, downtown Monterey.

The TheatreFest schedule of shows is as follows: noon —

LUNCH IS IN FASHION AT VENTANA

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

'Winter's Tale' brought to dazzling life

SHAKESPEARE's fabulous, extravagant tale of the evils of jealousy and the grace of forgiveness and redemption is brought dazzlingly to life in The Winter's Tale, now playing on the Repertory Stage at Hartnell College in Salinas.

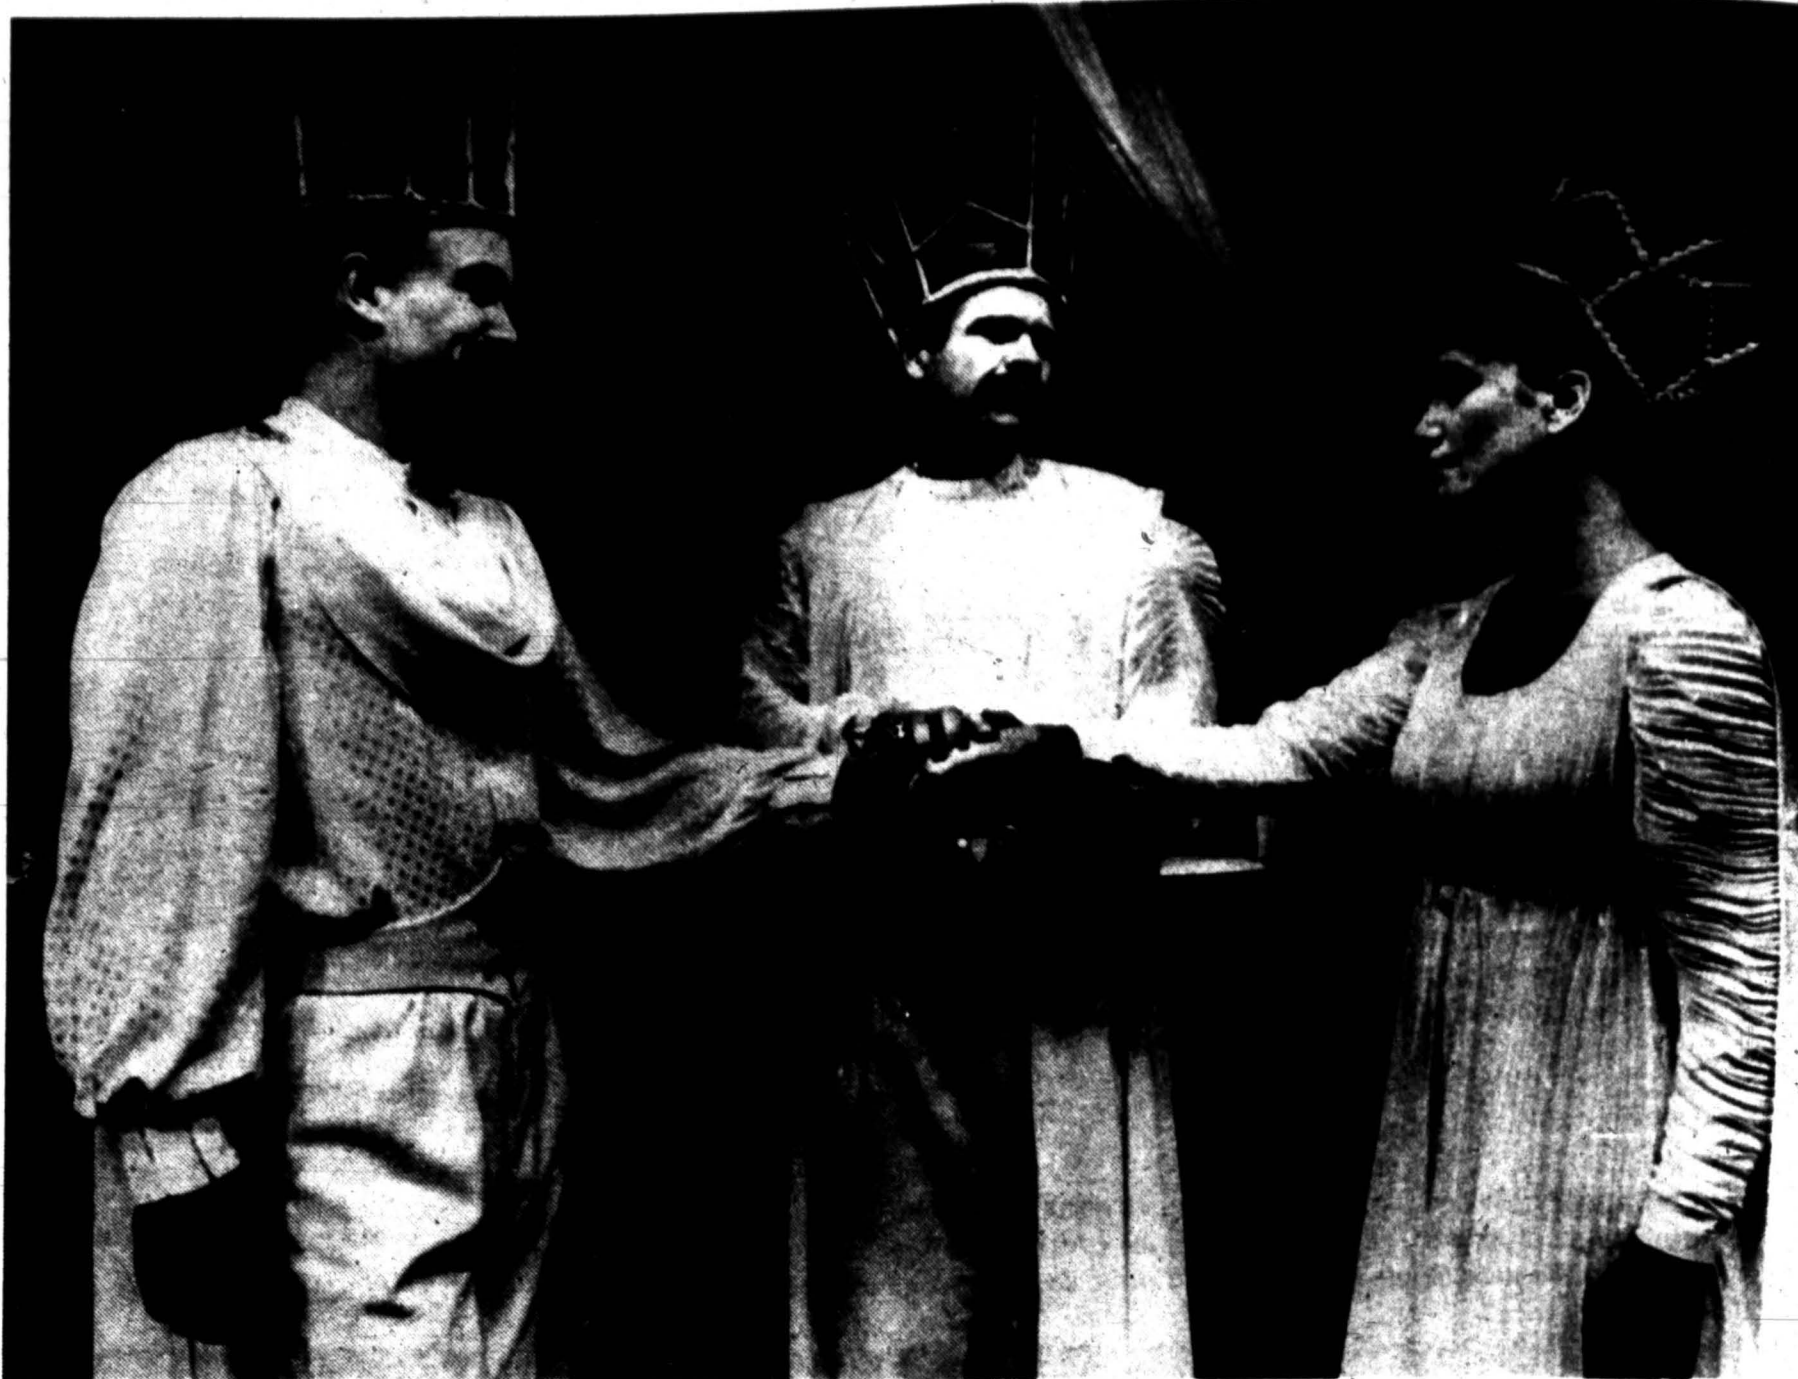

Directed by Dennis Bigelow of the Sacramento Theatre Company, the production features stunning black, white and gray costumes by Deborah Slate and a solid cast of talented performers who, for the most part, understand the rhythm and the color of Shakespeare's poetry as well as the subtexts of their parts.

"A sad tale's best for winter," says little Mamillius early in the play, and indeed most of the first three acts — were they performed alone — would stand as tragedy, for here we have a tale of two kings, friends since childhood, suddenly at odds because one, Leontes of Sicilia, has "drunk and seen the spider" of jealousy, an unreasonable emotion that consumes him without apparent cause and leads him to denounce his wife, banish his infant daughter, and attempt to murder his friend, king of Bohemia.

In this part of the play, Paul Ford's broad depiction of the jealousy-wracked Leontes is a riveting performance balanced by Carol Cronin's grace-laden Hermione (his queen), the sad puzzlement and then distress of Polixenes (Howie Muir), his friend, and the strong, very skillful performance of Pat Sibley as Paulina, Hermione's advocate.

Not least interesting is the way the language of the play echoes its themes, with early metaphors of regeneration ("there rooted between them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now") foreshadowing the second part of the play, and revealing Leontes' speech infected, like his mind, with thoughts of his queen's lechery.

But The Winter's Tale is no tragedy. Like other winters' tales, it culminates in the hope of regeneration and forgiveness. The play skips over 16 years of time (a gap explained by an elfin sprite with sparkling collar and mammoth wings) to pick up the plot in Bohemia, where Autolycus (Gregg Koski), one of Shakespeare's finer rogues, entertains with minor villainies and Old Shepherd (William J. Wolak) and his son (David Parker) shepherd in another kind of reality.

Wolak's shepherd handles his homely but colorful lines masterfully, and Parker is delightful as a lovable gull in a benign universe. Koski's Autolycus, delicately picking pockets, perpetrating scams, and fast-talking his way through a peasants' sheep-sharing party, is the archetypal streetperson, and his well-timed, merry antics provide a lot of entertainment.

There is much more: the trouble-laden courtship of the kings' children, the fantastical resolution of the entire plot in a visually dazzling final scene. And only one false step.

The Winter's Tale contains one piece of extravagance that is hard to perpetrate successfully. "Exit, pursued by a bear," says the stage direction, and in this production the bear looks rather like a fugitive from Toys R Us, and glaring, badly timed lighting hinders the illusion.

With this single exception, this is a striking, expert production of Shakespeare's ambitious fantasy, performed by a talented cast and imaginatively directed. There are literally too many fine performances to mention.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Piebald horse promotes human insights

HARTNELL COLLEGE Western Stage manages its repertory season so that, by this point in the season, the theatergoer can choose from at least six plays.

There is much worth seeing on the Western Stage, not least of all Mark Rozovsky's Strider, the life story of a piebald horse adapted from a story by Leo Tolstoy.

The interesting thing is that the life of the horse, Strider, is very much determined by the ethics and attitudes of the people into whose hands he falls. So Strider is really Tolstoy's balanced commentary on the follies, insensitivities and gratuitous evils of human nature. Which is not to short-change the horse, through whose dramatized story we learn all this.

As Strider, the long-legged horse with the misfortune to be born piebald, Howie Muir is wonderful. The role is a demanding one, with Muir switching from commentator to active participant in the plot and back again many times, and with scenes that span his long life.

Through it all, Muir creates and sustains a most difficult illusion: he is a man we are to believe is a horse. A lot of the time, he behaves like a horse, but still, we see, he is a man.

The entire cast participates in this feat of double vision, convincing us of their equine character while appearing before us frankly human. Yet it works extremely well.

Strider's story is told through mime, dance, and song, with a large chorus depicting the action throughout the evening. Every single number advances the action, and there are no false steps or wasted moments in this perfectly paced production.

As Strider's beloved master, Prince Serpuhofsky, George Berry brings a strong voice and fine character to his role of the young wealthy wastrel later changed by time and circumstances of his own making.

Hal Peiken is effective as Vaska, the drunken, embittered stable servant, and Larry Welch is haughty and fine as County Bobrinsky, who "owns" the horses.

Keythe C. Farley turned in a delightful performance as Darling, the dashing black stallion who is the apple of the horse-breeder's eye. His lively song and dance number on horses in love ("We know how to love! We are animals!") gets applause, and his engaging performance creates comic balance in the play.

The events of his life give Strider much food for rumination, and at one point he reflects, "To say 'my horse' seemed as strange to me as 'my earth' or 'my air.' Men imagined that I was the property of the stud groom." From the horse's point of view, this troublesome fiction of ownership is a puzzlement as well as the occasion for much of his misery.

The events of this most entertaining evening are enlivened with musical accompaniment overseen by music director Lynn Jemison-Renner; the chorus's effective movements are choreographed by Susan Sachs, and Elizabeth Poindexter's understated, clever costuming populates the stage with horses of many colors.

Strider is a provocative piece of theater offered in a fine production impeccably directed by Alan Cook.

Singles group meets Sunday

Single adults in their 30s and 40s are invited to join the monthly New People/New Places potluck dinner and planning meeting.

The group will meet at 6 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 4 in the community room of The Crossroads, Rio Road off Highway 1, Carmel. For details, call 624-3898, 373-3955 or 384-3086.

Cruelty to animals

THE CRUELTY of man to beast is reflected in Strider, an adaptation of Tolstoy's story about a piebald horse. Presented by The Western Stage, Strider includes this scene in which stable hand Vaska (Hal Peiken, center), and the groom (David Parker, right), ready Strider (Howie Muir) for punishment as the more perfect horses look on. Alan Cook directs, and choreography is by Carmel resident Susan Sachs.

Dancers sought for fall show

Dancers and performers are sought for the dance-theater production, Tights!, to be staged next month in Monterey.

Auditions are scheduled for 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 1 at the American Legion Hall, Dolores and Eighth in Carmel. The second audition is planned for 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 4 at The Club in Monterey.

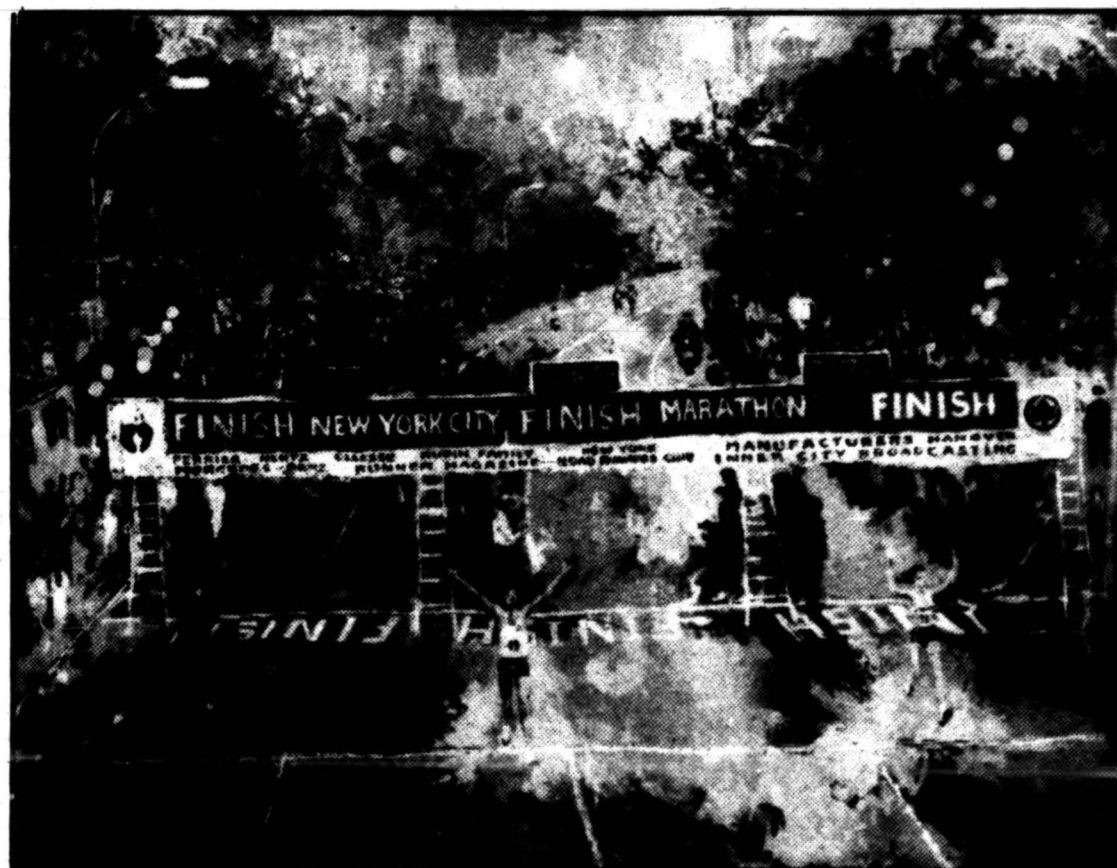

Dancers should be age 18 or older, be prepared to fill out forms and to dance. Resumes and biographies are optional.

For additional information, call 625-5598 between 10 a.m. and noon; or 375-6238 and leave a message.

YWCA schedules women's run

On Saturday, Aug. 3, the YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula will sponsor its sixth annual Women's Walk-Run. This event is open to girls and women of all ages and ability levels.

The event will consist of a 5,000 meter walk and run and a 10,000 meter run. The event begins at 9 a.m. on Saturday with same-day registration beginning at 7:30 a.m. Registration is $8 on the day of the event. The gently sloping course begins and ends at Lovers Point in Pacific Grove and follows the edge of the Monterey Bay.

Ribbons will be given to all finishers. There will be medals awarded to first place winners in each category.

The sixth annual YWCA Women's Walk-Run proceeds will benefit all YWCA programs, including the Domestic Violence Program, the YWCA Women's Center and the YWCA Library.

Registration forms and further information can be obtained by calling or stopping by the YWCA at 404 Camino El Estero, Monterey, 93940, 649-0834.

Early ticket order advised for aquarium

Weekend admission to the Monterey Bay Aquarium is now by advance reservation, as reported by Ticketron, ticket selling agent for the Cannery Row facility.

Advance tickets are available for a specific admission time at half-hour intervals between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. on weekends. Visitors may stay as long as they wish up until 6 p.m., when the aquarium closes.

The system has been designed to provide an orderly flow of viewers to the aquarium, opened last October. The Monterey Bay Aquarium was funded by a $40 million gift from David and Lucile Packard.

Same-day tickets must be purchased at the aquarium. Advance reservations can be placed at all Ticketron outlets nationwide and by mail.

Local Ticketron outlets sell aquarium tickets over the counter on a cash-only basis. No telephone or credit card sales will be accepted.

Local Ticketron outlets are located at the Wooden Balloon, 711 Cannery Row, Monterey; the YMCA Visitor Information Center, 600 Camino El Estero, Monterey; and the Sherwood Box Office, 940 N. Main St., Salinas.

Tickets purchased by telephone will carry a $1.50 per ticket service charge. There is a $1 per ticket service charge for tickets bought at Ticketron outlets or by mail.

Admission prices for the Monterey Bay Aquarium are $7 for adults, $3 for children ages three to 12, $5 for seniors over age 65 years of age and $5 for students with valid identification.

Mail order requests can be sent to Ticketron, Box 26430, San Francisco, Calif. 94126.

Society screens film classics

Contemporary and classic films from around the world will be screened by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society.

The Gods and the Dead is the Thursday, Aug. 1 feature. Directed by Ruy Guerra, this 1971 film, in Portuguese with subtitles, tells of the fierce struggle between two plantation owners.

Shown Friday and Saturday, Aug. 2-3, will be Celine and Julie Go Boating. Marie-France Pisier and Bulle Ogier star in this 1974 production. Directed by Jacques Rivette, it is an exuberant lark about two hyper-imaginative women who become involved in a haunted house mystery. It is in French with subtitles.

Roberto Rossellini's Open City is the Wednesday, Aug. 7 feature. This 1945 film won grand prize at the Cannes and Venice film festivals. A dramatic film about the second world war, Open City expresses an anti-Nazi message, although it was made while the Germans still occupied Rome. Anna Magnani stars. Open City is shown in Italian with subtitles.

All films begin at 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Tickets are $3.50 general, $2.75 students and seniors, $2 for film society members. For details, call 659-4795 between 5 p.m. and show time.

Kids offered a night out

W MONTEREY PENINSULA WINERIES

MORGAN — ST. VRAIN

Few places in the world can excite one's senses as fully as Monterey County. Fog and sun, sea and stone...the elements which lend so much beauty and contrast to this area...are the same elements which contribute to the distinctive quality of Monterey County Chardonnay. Inspired by the quality of Chardonnay from this area, Morgan Winery was established in 1982.

The winery is the result of a vision created by Dan Lee and shared by partner Donna George. Lee began making Monterey County wines in 1978 with Jekel Vineyard and later was winemaker for Durney Vineyard where he still serves as a consultant. George manages Wells Fargo Bank's Salinas Business Center and assists at the winery in her spare time. Other partners include Lee's partner and brother Dave, an Aptos accountant.

Morgan Chardonnay is a fine example of what the cool, coastal growing conditions of Monterey County and traditional winemaking methods can produce. The wine utilizes two superb vineyards in Monterey County. The cooler and more northern vineyard is Hillside, located on the west bench of the Sierra de Salinas near Gonzales. From this vineyard, the wine receives its structure — the ample acidity and varietal fruit that serves as its backbone. Cobblestone Vineyard is located further south in the Arroyo Seco area near Greenfield. This well-drained, warmer vineyard gives the wine a rich and buttery character. The blending of wines from these two vineyards accentuates the best in their individual characteristics, and produces a Chardonnay which is multi-faceted and complex. The characteristics so special in Monterey County Chardonnay are enhanced by traditional Burgundian winemaking methods...barrel fermentation in Burgundian oak, aging in contact with the yeast, undecement of malolactic fermentation in a portion of the wine...all lead to a wine which is Burgundian in character, yet with a California flair.

The winery recently added Sauvignon Blanc to its repertoire of fine wines. The wine was introduced under the St. Vrain label, a label designed for the winery's claret-style wines. St. Vrain is a fruitily, lightly varietal-style of Sauvignon Blanc, with a touch of French oak vanilla. The grapes come from the warmer Alexander Valley of Sonoma County. One third of the wine is barrel fermented and barrel aged in new Bordeaux Chateau barrels while the balance is stainless steel fermented at a moderately cool temperature.

The winery has enjoyed great success with its wines. The Morgan Chardonnays have received a Gold Medal from the 1983 Los Angeles County Fair, a Gold Medal from the Third Annual Los Angeles Wine Festival, and the American Champion award in a taste-off between gold medal winning Chardonnays. The St. Vrain Sauvignon Blanc was recently awarded a Gold Medal at the 1985 Orange County Fair.

Tours and tastings can be arranged by appointment (408-455-1382).

SMITH AND HOOK

Smith and Hook produces only one wine, an estate-bottled Cabernet Sauvignon.

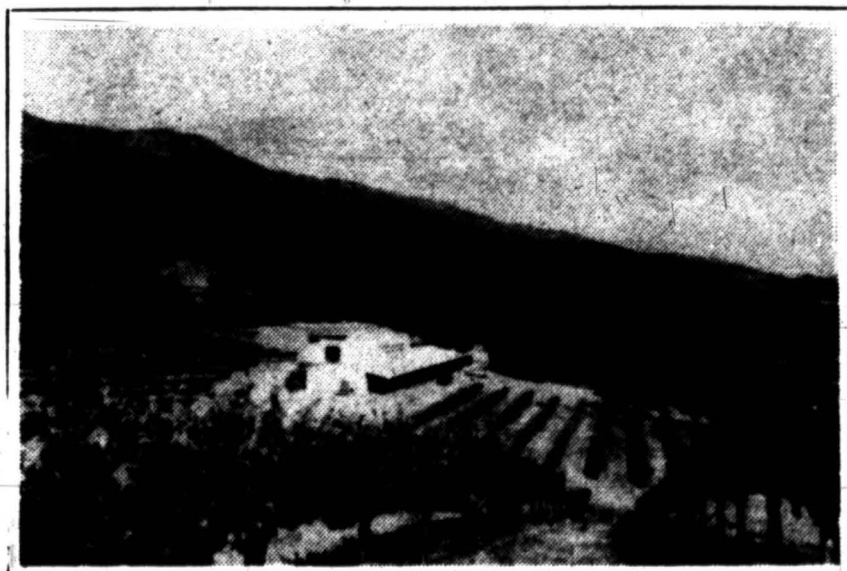

With seven grape-producing slopes on the Smith and Hook wine estate, the winemaker is able to craft a Cabernet Sauvignon with a structure that demonstrates unusual complexity and quality.

When harvest time comes, the grapes at Smith and Hook are carefully hand-picked. Each load of grapes arrives at the winery in 20 minutes or less. There, grapes are hand-graded so that only the finest enter the crusher. Wines made from the grapes grown on different slopes are kept separate until time for blending.

Fermentation occurs in open redwood fermenters of traditional design. Next, the young wine goes into small neutral oak barrels for a year. Wines from the various slopes are then blended to meet the winemaker's style objectives, and are placed in a combination of small American and French oak for about another year. Finally, the wine is bottled and aged further until the winemaker makes the final decision as to exactly when it should be released.

The quest for excellence does not end here. Smith and Hook strives to achieve its full potential through a continuing program of research and experimentation.

It's this kind of sustained commitment that is earning Smith and Hook a reputation for superior Cabernet Sauvignon.

Smith and Hook perches on the eastern slope of the Santa Lucia Mountains, overlooking the Salinas Valley.

Spanish expeditions led by Portola and Anza traveled through it in 1769 and 1774. Padres made wine in the 1790s at the Soledad Mission near Smith and Hook. And John Steinbeck immortalized this agricultural area in a number of his novels.

The vineyard was purchased in 1973 after an 11-year search that spanned three continents in pursuit of the right combination of soil, climate and vineyard exposure. The estate was created out of two ranches totalling 652 acres.

Efforts were made to retain the ranches' rustic feeling. The old stable now serves as the winery. The lab is in the former tack room, and offices are in the bunkhouse where ranch-hands once bedded down.

Grapevines are planted in rows contoured to catch the early morning sun. Oaks and other native plants occupy the deep canyons and steep hillsides that comprise the rest of the property.

The winery's goal is a Cabernet Sauvignon that meets the winemaker's objective of depth, structure, finesse and a long finish.

Smith and Hook wouldn't have it any other way.

If you or your organization would like to visit, call or write for an appointment. Smith & Hook, Drawer C, Soledad, CA 93960; (408) 678-2132

DURNEY VINEYARD

In 1954 William and Dorothy Durney purchased 1,200 acres in Upper Carmel Valley and named it Rancho Del Sueno — Ranch of Dreams. Their dream was to create a wine estate in the tradition of the great wine estates of Europe and produce wines of the highest quality. In 1968 the first vines were planted at a 1,200 foot elevation, making the Durneys the first family of wine in Carmel Valley.

William Durney

There is something magical in the soil here; attributed to the underground springs which flow ceaselessly beneath the vineyard from the mountain-side, obviating the necessity to irrigate or fertilize. Long vistas of emerald vines now cover 145 acres in a special micro-climate formed by mountains nestled against the Los Padres National Forest. The vineyard is dotted with century old oaks, and bordered by many madrones, buckeyes, maples, wild lilacs and huge green ferns.

The family chapel, which graces the label, was built in 1973 and the winery was completed in 1977.

This unique piece of land provides the ideal environment for the growth and yearly production of award-winning 100% varietal vintage wines. Carmel Valley, CA 93924; (408) 625-5433.

WINETASTING WITH BACCHUS

Bacchus Gourmet Winetasting and Sightseeing Tours is owned and operated by Helga Fellay, a former teacher, translator and writer, and a resident of Carmel Valley for some 8 years. "To me," says Helga, "California is wine country. Vineyards and wineries are as uniquely Californian as is the splendor of our Pacific coast. Discovering off-road wineries is one of the most exciting activities we have to offer, and one that can be enjoyed year round."

The Bacchus Tours concept came to Helga while on a Napa Wine Tour out of San Francisco. "The country was beautiful and the tour interesting and most informative," she says, "but I was in a large bus with 54 other tourists. It was a real cattle drive — masses of people, herded to large wineries owned by multinational conglomerates." It did not jibe with Helga's idea of what winetasting should be like: take the bigness out of it, forget the corporate approach, make it a uniquely personal experience! So she formed her small company with the motto: Cater to no more than six guests at a time; provide door-to-door transportation in a small van; adjust your schedule to their preferences; add a sightseeing tour of historic Mission San Juan and San Juan Bautista; provide information about the history of the area, of vines, wines and wineries; help them discover many select, family owned and operated wineries on scenic country roads; and toss in a gourmet picnic! It was an idea just waiting to be conceived, and the Hecker Pass/Uvas Valley wine region was just there, waiting to be discovered! Long known as a bastion of Italian winemaking families with a penchant for making dry red wines, the area has recently evolved into a more heterogeneous and progressive wine region, and is now producing some wines comparable in quality to those from Napa Valley. Thomas Kruse more or less started the revolution that has changed this region from a jug producer to a source of vintage dated varietals. But one of the driving forces behind this change is Terry Parks, a former schoolteacher, who in 1976 with his wife Mary Kay, founded Sycamore Creek Vineyard on the site of the old Solis Rancho and the Marchetti Winery in Uvas Valley. His Zinfandel, Riesling, Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonnay have all won gold medals at the Orange County Fair. Former Carmelites Debra Dodd and Red Johnson modernized a winery founded by the Bertero family in 1917, and now operate Summerhill Vineyards. The Fortino Brothers — Ernie of Fortino Winery and Mario of Hecker Pass Winery, in 1979 renovated the Cassa Brothers Winery to perpetuate the natural Italian Winemaking style that they learned on their family's vineyard in Calabria in Southern Italy. Old World traditions are also blended with modern techniques by Nikola Kirigin-Chargin, a native of Croatia, who in 1976 founded Kirigin Cellars at the site of the Old Bonesio Winery. Lovely picnic grounds await the guests there. For tour information call (408) 659-5116.

MONTEREY PENINSULA WINERY

THE WINERY... We are a small but complete working winery, with every available space packed full of barrels. All aspects of the wine production are located here on the premises, from crushing to bottling, tasting and sales. The wines we make are handcrafted and produced in very small lots. Special attention is given to grape varieties, vineyards and microclimates. We emphasized naturalness and full-bodied flavor that comes with the ripeness of the grapes.

Located on the city limits of Monterey, the winery occupies the stately old ranch house of a former Spanish landgrant. Known to locals of the Monterey Peninsula as the "Chateau" or the "Old Stonehouse," the property was originally the Rancho Saucito (meaning "little willows"). During the 1920s the Charles Ryan family handbuilt the structure as their home. The uniquely sturdy building was completely constructed of native stone found on the property and its 5 1/2" thick limestone walls now protect our wines naturally at a cool 58°F.

THE WINES... We strive to make all of our wines 100 percent varietal, 100 percent from the vineyard of appellation, unfiltered and unfiltered, i.e. in the most natural method possible. If we deviate from the above in any way, we so state on the label. We are proud of this discipline which produces classic rich Old World style wines, full-bodied and intense, with emphasis on retaining the characteristics of the varietal grape from which the wines are made. Our wines are handtended, fermented in small quantities and naturally clarified in the cask.

Our emphasis is on bottling wines from particular varieties, vineyards and microclimates as individual lots. We devote special attention to preserving each particular grape's personality. Winemaker Roy Thomas says, "As stewards of the wine, our role is only the gentle direction and refinement of each individual wine, leading it to where it will develop its greatest inherent potential." Because of this, we often have as many as five to seven separate lots of Zinfandels each year. We are not afraid to preserve a small unique lot of wine and bottle it individually, rather than blend it away.

The Monterey Peninsula Winery and Tasting Room is open daily, 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. all year long. The tasting room, located in the winery building, offers a wide selection of our wines; as many as 20 may be tasted on a given day. Browse through our vine-clad courtyard and grounds, explore our antique wine presses and enjoy a picnic lunch with your family and friends beside the lilypond.

We are located on the Monterey-Salinas Highway, route 68, 1 1/2 miles east of the Monterey Airport (left of road). Watch for our sign and the Old Stonehouse. For information call Winery, (408) 372-4949.

ROBERT TALBOTT VINEYARDS

A DREAM COME TRUE... The year was 1963. The place, a small family hotel in Meursault, France. The dream, a vineyard in Carmel Valley.

That year the Talbott family motored through the wine country of Italy following a silk buying trip to Como. This experience, coupled with a tour of the wineries and vineyards along the famous wine road of France sparked a dream that has culminated, some 20 years later, in the Robert Talbott Vineyards and their first Chardonnay, to be released in the Fall of 1985.

The dream came closer to reality in the 1960's when the Diamond T Ranch was purchased. This steep hillside property has the spartan soil that is so important to the raising of premium grapes. The search ended with the acquisition of additional land in the Upper Carmel Valley known as the Chalk Flats, where the winery now stands.

The actual planting of the grapes began when Robert Talbott could finally devote full time to this long planned dream. Superior quality was to be the goal and there would be no compromise. The same family tradition for excellence that has made the Robert Talbott Vineyards the finest in its field is the criteria for the Robert Talbott Vineyards.

An exhaustive search for a proven winemaker was rewarded with the selection of Kenneth Wright, whose knowledge, dedication and attention to detail assured final fulfillment of the original dream. Ken is now general manager as well.

The Talbott Chardonnay is aged for nearly two years before its release. This added cellaring, far beyond normal standards, assures you that the wine is ready to be enjoyed. If you choose to cellar our wine for an extended period, your patience will be rewarded with greater complexity and further refinement.

Our vineyards are located in two distinctly different climates of the Carmel Valley. The Chardonnay and Pinot Noir varietals are grown near the Los Laureles Grade. This vineyard, known as the Diamond T, is on land owned by the Talbott family for the last 25 years. Being only a few miles from the ocean, this cool climate is ideally suited to the early ripening varietals.

Our other vineyard, known as the Chalk Flats, is in the Upper Carmel Valley off of Tassajara Road. During the growing season it is regularly 10 to 15 degrees warmer than the Diamond T location. For this reason we have planted the Chalk Flats site to Sauvignon Blanc and Semillon, which prefer the warmer climates. These varietals are blended in the classic style of dry white Bordeaux wines. P.O. Box 267, Carmel Valley, CA 93924. Business and Sales (408) 375-0505.

WHITE-WASHED structures found on Greek islands are captured in the acrylic paintings of Ron Stout, whose works are showcased at Village Artistry through Aug. 18. An opening reception is planned noon to 4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 4.

Greek islands caught on canvas by Ron Stout

BOTH MAN-MADE and natural wonders of the Greek Islands are captured in a series of acrylic on canvas paintings by Ron Stout.

The artist will be present for the opening reception of a solo show of his works, to take place noon to 4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 4 at Village Artistry. Stout's work will be featured through Aug. 18 at the gallery, located on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Carmel.

Stout took his art training at Choinard Art Institute in Los Angeles, The Academy of Art in San Francisco and the Accademia Di Belle Arti Di Brera in Milan. For several years he taught both art and English in European and American schools. His work is collected in private and public locations on both continents.

Stout lives and works in California's Mother Lode country. Enamored with the Mediterranean, he presents a dozen works with Greek architecture as the central theme.

Using a limited palette of whites, grays and mauve with clean and simple design, Stout creates images which evoke feelings of stark, quiet loneliness. Early morning and late afternoon reflected light and shadows lend his paintings a sense of atmosphere that transports the viewer to the foot of Grecian buildings in Mykonos, Corfu and San Torini.

"I have developed an appreciation for purity of form and simplicity of design," said the artist. "I am working to convey a sense of beauty, well-being and peace to a world wrought with turmoil and unrest."

Village Artistry is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

For more information, call 624-3448.

Richenda Ellis works featured at Evans

RICHENDA ELLIS' wall hangings and acrylics will be featured throughout August at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Carmel.

An opening reception is planned 3 to 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 2 at the gallery, located in Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

After two years at the San Francisco School of Fine Arts, Ellis travelled in 1926 to England where she studied dynamic symmetry under Maxwell Armfield at the New Forest School. The next year she devoted to study in Paris.

Returned to San Francisco, the artist worked in her sculpture studio under the supervision of Benvenuto Bufano. From 1928 to 1932, she resided in Berlin, studying pottery, ceramic sculpture and color theory at the two state arts and crafts schools and exhibiting work in several galleries.

In the late '30s Ellis lived in Hawaii, where she taught pottery and ceramic sculpture in the Honolulu Museum and exhibited at the Honolulu Gumps as well as the branch of that store in San Francisco. For the next two decades, Ellis worked in her own ceramic studios in Atherton and Palo Alto, exhibiting both locally and around the country.

It was not until 1970 that she began to paint in acrylics, and this medium has preoccupied her during the past 15 years in Carmel. Here she built a studio in her home in order to make and show her seven-foot wall hangings, bird and mountain paintings and her continuing series of Mexican paintings.

This series reflects Ellis' interest in the pre-Hispanic culture of Mexico. During the last 10 years, the artist has made five extended trips to Mexico. Her favored archeological sites are on the Mayan Peninsula. She received special permission to make drawings for her Mexican series of paintings at the National Museum of Anthropology in Mexico City.

In her Mexican series, Ellis lifts ancient sculptures about of their museum background to paint them against the local scenes of different native cultures and mythologies.

Ellis explained that she is struck by the likeness the Indians of today bear to their ancestors. In her painting, The Victim, she captures a contemporary girl with typical Mayan features. In the face of the Oaxacan girl in Life in Death and Death in Life, she attempts to reflect the mystic knowledge of earth, typical of ancient funerary urns of Monte Alban in Oaxaca.

CAA features watercolors by Dominguez, Bullas

TWO LOCAL artists whose specialty is watercolor will be teamed during the August show at the Carmel Art Association galleries.

Works by Miguel Dominguez and Will Bullas will be highlighted in two one-man shows in the galleries on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel.

Both of the artists excel in watercolor. According to CAA spokesman Sam Colburn, "This used to be a medium in which you worked for 10 years before taking up oil, but aquarelle is become more popular all the time."

Dominguez was born in Texas, but his family moved to Gonzales in the Salinas Valley when he was only six. He started to draw and paint at an early age, and won his first award at 14.

The artist is basically self-taught and is a very sensitive observer of nature. He has participated in more than 35 one-man and group shows throughout California. In 1979 he and his paintings were included in a documentary film depicting the arts and other cultural activities of the Western Hemisphere. This film is for use in all Spanish-speaking countries.

His watercolors are shown in galleries in California, Santa Fe, New York City, and in many business and private collections.

Will Bullas is a real Southwestern artist. He was raised in cow country, went to Arizona State University as an art major, and completed his education at the Brooks Institute of Fine Art in Santa Barbara. He loves watercolor, the animal kingdom and cowboys. Many of his works would establish him as a comic surrealist.

He is a member of the American Watercolor Society, and won the Strathmore Award at the 1981 Rocky Mountain National Watermedia Exhibition in Denver, Colo. His work was included in the 1982 Watercolor-USA exhibition at the Springfield Museum of Art, Springfield, Mo.

The two-man show will be augmented by the regular, monthly exhibition of work in different media by other members of the Carmel Art Association. The opening date is Aug. 6, the closing date Sept. 4.

Margot's Cafe/Gallery: Paintings and drawings by Grace Meredith and Sam Colburn, 170 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove. Through Sept. 7.

John Miller Galleries: Focus on Travel, photographs by John Livingstone and Frances Bradley, San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel. Through Aug. 5.

Zantman Art Galleries: Sculpture by Dennis Smith, paintings by Gunnar Anderson, Sixth Avenue at Mission Street, Carmel. YWCA Library Gallery: Lifelines, color photographs by Meredith Mullins; 404 Camino El Estero, Monterey. Through Sept. 5.

Site 311: New work on paper and sheetrock and sculptural construction by Margeaux Klein; 311 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove.

Monterey Bay Aquarium: Photographic exhibit of underwater wildlife by Charles Arneson and Filip Nicklin, 886 Cannery Row, Monterey. Through October.

Carmel artist's abstract images showcased

Works by abstract colorist Miriam Nieman of Carmel will be featured throughout August in the lobby of Great Western Savings, Dolores and Seventh in Carmel.

Nieman's work has been shown throughout the United States in both group and one-man shows in galleries and museums. Her paintings are owned by both private individuals and corporations.

Starting at an early age, she was influenced by her artist father, Matthew Wagner, who encouraged her to use materials around his studio.

Nieman graduated from the Art Academy of Cincinnati and has won awards from The Library of Congress, Washington, D.C., Brooklyn Museum of Art, Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center and Cincinnati Art Museum.

She obtained her art degree from Miami University at Oxford, Ohio.

The collection can be viewed 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Clown images shown

"UNDER THE Big Top" is the theme of a collection of oil paintings and collages by Alice Jean Small shown during August at the Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Gallery. An opening reception is planned 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 11. The gallery is in the arts building, Eighth at Second Street at Fort Ord.

NOTICE INVITING SEALED BIDS
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that sealed proposals will be received by the District Board, Carmel Sanitary District, at the District office, Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Building 26358 Carmel Rancho Lane, P.O. Box 221428 Carmel, CA 93922, until 2 p.m. on August 13, 1985, at which time they will be publicly opened and read for performing the work as follows:

Provide all labor, materials, equipment and services to replace the existing start-stop engine control relay panel and generator controls as per the Specifications.

The work shall be done in accordance with the specifications therefore adopted, to which special reference is hereby made. Pursuant to the statutes of the State of California, the District Board has adopted the general prevailing rates for overtime and legal holidays in the locality in which the work will be performed as determined by the State Director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

It shall be incumbent upon the successful bidder to pay not less than the minimum hourly wages required by said Schedule of Wage Determinations to be paid the various laborers employed directly upon the worksite. In the event that any change in the above rates is made, said changed rates shall apply to this public project without adjustment in the bid price as submitted in the proposal.

The District reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bid or in the bidding.

The results of the bidding will be reported to the District Board within thirty (30) days of the date of the bid opening at which time the District may award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder as so reported, however, said District Board reserves its right to reject any or all bids and to waive irregularities of any bids.

No bidder shall withdraw his bid for a period of thirty (30) calendar days after the date set by the Board for the opening thereof.

Specifications and proposal forms may be secured at no charge by writing to: Carmel Sanitary District, P.O. Box 221428, Carmel, CA, 93922, or call (408) 624-1248.

Dated: July 19, 1985.

NOTICE INVITING SEALED PROPOSALS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that sealed proposals will be received by the District Board, Carmel Sanitary District, at the District Office, Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Building No. 26358, San Carlos Agency Building, Carmel Rancho Lane, P.O. Box 221428, Carmel, California 93922, until 2 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 8, 1985, at which time they will be publicly opened and read for performing work as follows:

Remove and replace 634 L.F. of 8" and 990 L.F. of 6" vitrified clay sewer pipe with 8" polyvinyl chloride sewer pipe in 20 ft. lengths along Junipero Avenue from Ocean Avenue to a point northerly of Third Avenue. This work consists of removal and replacement of the existing sanitary sewer pipeline together with reconnections to the existing manholes and service laterals which are to remain.

This work shall be done in accordance with the Specifications therefore adopted, to which special reference is hereby made.

Pursuant to the Statutes of the State of California, the District Board has adopted the general prevailing rates for overtime and legal holidays in the locality in which the work is to be performed determined by the State Director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

It shall be incumbent upon the successful bidder to pay not less than the minimum hourly wages required by said Schedule of Wage Determinations to be paid to the various laborers and mechanics employed directly upon the site of the work. In the event that any change in the above rates is made, said changed rates shall apply to this public project without adjustment in bid price.

All proposals or bids shall be accompanied by a cashier's or certified check payable to the order of the Carmel Sanitary District amounting to ten percent of the bid, or by a bond in said amount and payable to said District signed by the bidder and a corporate surety. Said check shall be forfeited or said bond shall become payable to said District in case the bidder depositing the same does not, within fifteen days after written notice that the contract has been awarded to him: (a) enter into a contract within the District and (b) furnish a certificate of insurance, a bond of faithful performance and a labor and material bond as described in the Specifications.

The District reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bid or in the bidding.

The results of the bidding will be reported to the District Board within thirty (30) days of the date of bid opening at which time the District may award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder as so reported; however, said District Board reserves its right to reject any or all bids and to waive irregularities of any bids.

No bidder shall withdraw his bid for a period of thirty (30) calendar days after the date set by the District Board for the opening thereof.

The work is to be completed within 45 consecutive calendar days.

Specifications and proposal forms may be secured at no charge from Carmel Sanitary District, Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, San Carlos Agency Building, Carmel, California 93922.

THE ULTIMATE CARMEL COTTAGE OPEN FOR INSPECTION:

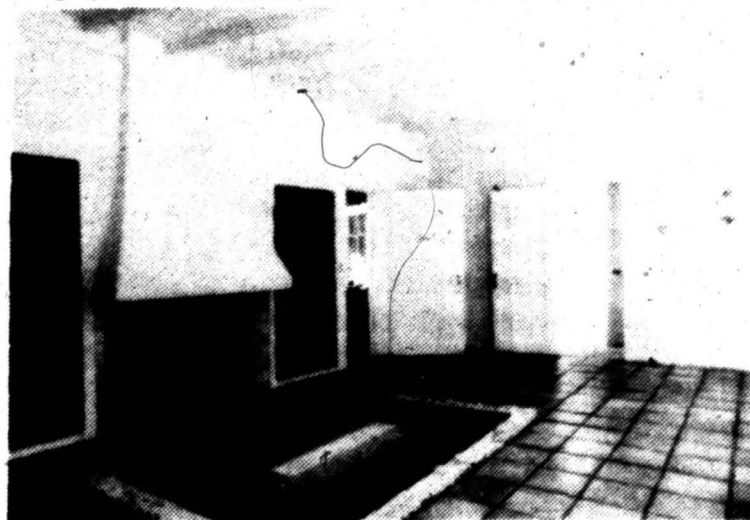

Sat. and Sun. 1-4
Southwest Corner 8th and
Santa Fe Streets

The elements which make up the perfect Carmel Cottage are location, charm, privacy, utility, and flexibility. Some houses have a few of these qualities but only rarely do you find that home which "has it all."

This property consists of two full Carmel Lots, located just two blocks from the corner of the commercial district, yet very quiet and very private. The beach is a short walk, as are Sunset Center and the Forest Theatre. Mature oaks surround the house, yet the large stone patio has sun all through the day.

The home was built in the 1930's... designed by famed San Francisco architect Gardiner Daly. In the past six months it has been treated to the most painstaking restoration and remodel we have ever witnessed. New wiring, new plumbing, new roof, new tile floors, gorgeous new bathrooms, and bright and cheery new kitchen.

Statistically, the home offers two bedrooms (master with fireplace), two baths, large central living room, large kitchen with breakfast nook, lots of storage and closets, plus a detached two car garage. A special bonus comes with the property in the form of full plans and all permits for a new double garage with guest house attached. Call us for more details or drop by for a treat, we know you will love this house. $305,000.

THE THREE BARGAINS OF THE YEAR!

1) A beautiful Carmel cottage nestled in a setting of serene privacy. A wonderful place to escape the hustle of our everyday world and just dream — to relax. It has 1 bed. and 1 bath, with a lovely modern kitchen. Plus a cute artist's studio. Double garage. All on an oversized 5000 sq. ft. lot. The owner has just reduced the price by $15,000 to $134,900. Can you believe that!!? This won't last long.

2) Our second bargain is a Carmel business opportunity — a retail business that just has to be the most beautiful store in Carmel. It's in a prime Ocean Avenue location but the rent is so reasonable that you just won't believe it's an Ocean Avenue rent — just over $1 a foot! So often we list Carmel businesses that are highly priced — yet seem to make little profits. This one is NOT in that category. It's a great money maker right now and we have some suggestions that would make it a veritable goldmine! The owners are tired and would like to sell to enjoy some time to travel. They are asking $150,000. — a very fair price. Submit your terms.

3) Our third bargain is another business op. in The Crossroads — a gift store/art gallery that the present owners are anxious to move. They also have other plans. This store is in the best location and could be the greatest buy for someone who really wants to develop their own ideas in a retail business. This was originally priced at $65,000 but the owner says SELL, SELL, SELL! So submit your offers around $45,000 and we think you'll have a deal.

Flash! If you are looking for a steal we know of an estate in Carmel Valley that was originally listed for $1.9 million that could be bought for $795,000 — maybe less.
